SOLDIERS ON GUARD IN VIENNA

BURY RIOT VICTIMS PUBLICLY; STREETS CROWDED BY PEOPLE

Industry Pauses In Tribute To Dead—City
Is Quiet

VIENNA, July 20.—Nearly 15,000 soldiers and police including the newly created gendarmes were on duty throughout Vienna today to prevent disorders during the funeral of eighty-one Socialists who were killed during the street fighting since last Friday. There were ten other dead whose funerals were not held today in connection with the public function.

Today's public funeral was conducted by the municipal-ity, which is under control of the Socialists.

Thousands of persons filled the streets through which the long line of hearses was to pass. The police were under orders to prevent demonstrations where inflam-matory speeches might be made. Following the services the bod-ies were to be taken to the munici-pal crematorium for burning. Only members of the families of the victims, officials and the Social-ist party and representatives of the Municipal government were ad-mitted to this ceremony.

The final service was to start at 2 o'clock and all industry in the city was instructed to cease opera-tions for fifteen minutes from that hour in tribute to the memory of the dead.

The city has returned to normal and all the workers have returned to their posts. There is little left to mark the tragic happenings of the past week save the wrecked palace of justice and the presence of soldiers and extra police in the streets.

It is estimated that the property damage caused by the rioting may reach $40,000,000.

Chancellor Seipel and his gov-ernmental colleagues are engaged in restoring political equilibrium. Whether the government will take restrictive measures against the Communists, who are held respon-sible for the outbreaks, is not cer-tain.

Many of the ringleaders are in jail and will be tried in the ordi-nary course of events but it is unlikely that any organized move will be made against the Commu-nist party.

Preparations are under way for the opening tomorrow of the special session of parliament.

DEPUTY FAILS TO APPEAR IN COURT

Kenneth C. Barr, county road pa-trolman, may face citation for con-tempt of court, for failure to ap-pear before Mayor F. W. Ogan, Tuesday, the day set for his sentence on a charge of violating a village traffic ordinance. Mayor Ogan is quoted as declar-ing he would summon the officer to appear before him Wednesday.

Barr was charged in an affidavit sworn out by Al Zeiler, marshal of Jamestown, with violating the village ordinance.

HEART BALM SUIT HALTED

WHEELING, W. Va., July 20.—Counsel for Mrs. Lillian Tooth-man, young divorced matron and mother of four children, today an-nounced that her $300,000 breach of promise suit against James Hawley, 80, wealthy real estate op-erator, had been withdrawn from court. No reason for the with-drawal was given.

TAKE ANDY ALONG

Andy Gump, who talks enough to be in Congress, has deserted the crutch that helped him around when he was re-covering from a broken leg, and is preparing for his an-nual fishing excursion.

Gump's annual expeditions to the habitat of Old Timmer, the backwoodsman with whom he fraternizes on his fishing expedi-tion, constitute some of the freshest bits of the story that sustains this intriguing comic.

In the solitude of the vast forests, Gump and his guide indulge in friendly banter that betrays the keen wit and ora-torial ability of the man who writes Syd Smith's script.

While you are on your vaca-tion you will not want to miss Andy on his vacation. Your vaca-tion will be the more enjoy-able for having sympathized and rejoiced with the blatant citizen from Chicago whose an-imals are making the whole country laugh.

Andy will go on your vaca-tion with you if you phone the circulation department of The Evening Gazette, 111 or 800.

ARMS CONFERENCE MARKING TIME

HELEN WAINWRIGHT WEDS IN HASTE AND REPENTS IN HASTE

By MARY BLADE
Exclusive Dispatch, Copyright 1927
NEW YORK, July 20.—"It was all that silly theater manager's fault. His sense of humor sure was cramped. Now I've got to go through all the annoyance and nasty publicity of an annulment. I'm just sick about it."

Helen Wainwright, pretty, plump, and internationally famous as a swimmer sat on the front porch of her family's home at Flushing, L. I., and tugged at the border of her dainty handkerchief with nervous fingers. She was very close to tears. It had become necessary to ask Miss Wainwright if it was true that her recent marriage to G. L. Holland, theater organist of Dal-las, Tex., was about to be declared null and void.

It was, Helen admitted. Moreover, she added indignantly that she was never married, "not really married, you know." She left her "husband," she said, two hours after the wedding ceremony. She has never seen him since; "and I don't want to see him," she insisted.

It all happened, Helen explained when she was a partner in Gertrude Ederle's stunt act she was touring a vaudeville circuit. The bright manager of a Dallas theater thought it would be a good publicity to announce that one of the girls was to be married to a Dal-las man. Holland was picked as the bridegroom and the announce-ment was made from the stage.

"I don't know why I fell for it, but I did," Mrs. Holland mourned. "I wore a ten-cent ring on my wedding ring finger, and we went through with the ceremony. Next morning it was in all the papers and people began to send me pres-ents and congratulations, and my people were upset about it. Such a fuss! I didn't think what I was doing. I never regarded the mar-riage seriously."

"Holland's a nice boy, but I hard-ly knew him. Certainly I didn't want to marry him; or anybody else."

Oh, well! Marry in haste and an-nul at leisure.

DEATH OF FERDINAND CREATES INTEREST ABOUT SUCCESSION

VIENNA, July 20.—News of the death of King Ferdinand, of Rou-mania, aroused keen interest throughout central Europe today as to the question of royal suc-cession.

The new titular head of the Roumanian state is five year old Prince Michael, who was created heir apparent on Dec. 31, 1925, when his father, Prince Carol, re-nounced his rights to the suc-cession.

MEETING HALTS FOR BRITISH TO CONFER AGAIN WITH LONDON

Discussion Expected To Resume Early Next Week

GENEVA, July 20.—The Anglo-American-Japanese naval limitation conference was halted today by the ab-sence of the British delegates, who have gone to London for a consultation with the cabi-net and the admiralty. Vis-count Cecil left last night and the other members of the British delegation prepared to leave today.

It is possible that the con-ference may resume early next week.

Great Britain and Japan had al-ready reached an agreement "in principle" for a tentative cruiser tonnage of 500,000 for the United States and Great Britain and 325,000 for Japan. But this allotment was not satisfactory to the Ameri-cans.

It has been reported previously that a tri-partite agreement had been reached, but this was denied by Hugh Gibson, head of the American delegation.

"BEAUTY" HAPPY OVER CONTEST THAT WILL GIVE HIM NEW HOME

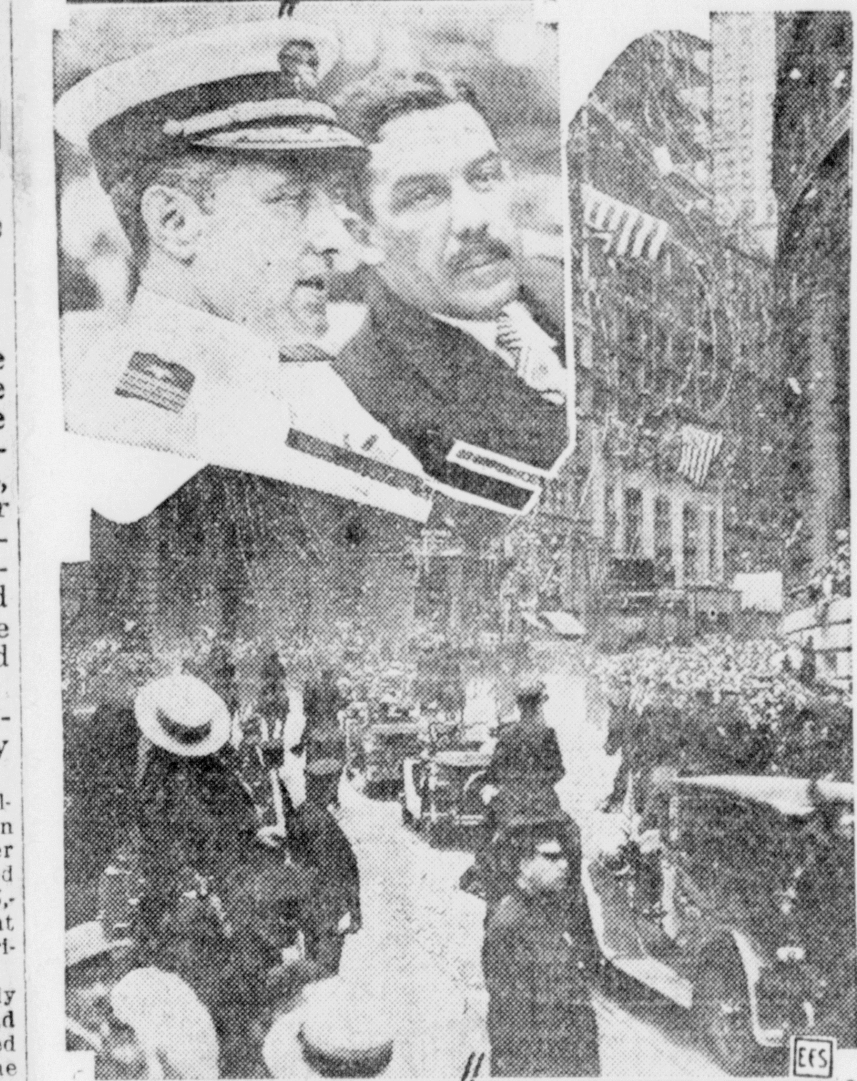

"Beauty," the Shetland pony that will be given by The Chew Pub-lishing Co., to some Greene County boy or girl next month, was interviewed in his stable.

"Nothing," he added, "could give me greater pleasure. The compan-ionship of a young child is what I need for I find that during these nice summer days, I am imprison-ed within the walls of this stable."

"On the other hand I would long to romp and play, to kick up my heels and show some young com-panion how I could carry him about on my strong back."

"Don't laugh when I say strong," continued "Beauty." "It is one of my prides that I am stout of heart and limb. In the prime of my pony

BROADWAY GREET'S FLIERS

With its customary accolade of torn paper, ticker tape, and the shouts of thousands lined on the sidewalks, Broadway yesterday paid tribute to Commander Byrd, Clarence Chamberlin, George Noville, Bert Acosta and Berndt Balchen, returning transatlantic fliers. The top picture shows the general scene; below are Commander Byrd and Grover Whelan, chairman of Mayor Walker's committee of welcome.

THREE INJURED WHEN AUTO HIT BY "HIT-AND-RUN" AUTOISTS

Baby Unhurt When Thrown Into Bushes Along
Road—Victims Have Injuries Dressed
At Hospital Here

Three persons, including two wo-men, were injured, not seriously, when their car was struck by "hit-skip" motorists on a road below Spring Valley at 11 o'clock Tues-day night.

A baby was tossed out of the car into the high weeds along the pike and occupants of the machine searched for some time in the darkness before it was found un-injured in the bushes.

The auto was occupied by J. W. Flowers, his wife, Mrs. Edith Flow-ers, Lockland, O., and Mrs. Lewis J. Streitenbecker, Cincinnati, O. One of the women sustained a deep cut on the ankle and the others were painfully bruised.

The accident victims suffered so from their injuries, that they were unable to walk to the closest farm house or otherwise seek aid im-mediate. It was not until 1 o'clock that a passing motorist took the people to McClellan Hospital in

CAVALIERI SUES FOR PARIS DIVORCE

PARIS, July 20.—Access to the divorce papers to dissolve the marriage of Lucien Muratore, op-er-a singer, and Lina Cavalieri, op-er-a singer and famed Italian beauty, today revealed that it was the so-prano and not Muratore who start-ed the action.

Mme. Cavalieri in her appeal charges that she had been desert-ed by her husband. She asked per-mission of the court to change her residence from the apartment where she had lived with Muratore to the Hotel D'Albe, Avenue George V. No plea for alimony is made.

Muratore has not filed an an-swer of any kind, and through his attorneys has informed the court that he will permit judgment by default.

"BEAUTY" HAPPY OVER CONTEST THAT WILL GIVE HIM NEW HOME

"To those who enter the contest and do not win me, I trust there will be ample compensations in the cash commissions offered by the newspaper that is giving me away."

And thus having signified that he had made a very long speech indeed, "Beauty" indicated that he would like to be left alone. To en-ter the lists for "Beauty," all you have to do is to fill out the entry blank in the full page advertise-ment in today's paper, and mail it to the contest manager.

The contest starts Thursday morning and the winner will be based on the number of votes ob-tained for subscriptions to The Evening Gazette.

There were thirty foreigners among those arrested.

RULER SUCCEUMBS AT BUCHAREST PALACE AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Royal Family At Bedside Except Exiled Prince
Carol—Regency Will Rule Until Heir
Reaches Majority

BUCHAREST, Roumania, July 20.—Following a long ill-ness from cancer, King Ferdinand, of Roumania, died at the royal palace at 2:15 o'clock this morning. Queen Marie and all the other members of the royal family except former Crown Prince Carol were at the bedside.

Carol, who renounced the right to succession because of marital troubles, has been living in self imposed exile in Paris.

The members of the regency council, which will rule during the minority of Prince Michael, son of Prince Carol, met with the Bratiano cabinet today.

Premier Bratiano is expected to compromise with the National Peasant party, chief supporters of Prince Carol, in order to secure their support for the regency council, thus guaranteeing the exclusion of Prince Carol from any share in the government.

The scene in the death chamber was a pathetic one.

Last night the dying king was continuously, falling intermit-tent-ly into unconsciousness. His weak-ness was so great that he could scarcely speak although he tried to do so. His lips moved and Queen Marie bent over in an effort to hear what he wished to say, but the murmurs were so weak she could not understand them. It is believed that Ferdinand spoke of his absent son Carol whom he wished to see before he died.

For weeks the king had been wasting away and was little more than a skeleton when he died.

Although Ferdinand had been suffering from a malignant growth for a long time his condition did not become serious until last year while Queen Marie was visiting the United States. A hurry call was sent to her to return home.

In the meantime specialists were summoned to Bucharest from Paris. Radical treatments admin-istered, and the king responded temporarily, but later his condi-tion became worse.

Within the past few weeks Fer-dinand sank rapidly and his death was expected.

King Ferdinand, of Roumania, was the last member of the house of Hohenzollern to occupy an im-portant throne. He also was per-haps the most unhappy member of that once reigning house.

Although the Roumanian throne is hereditary, passing from father to son, Ferdinand was elected, not born to the throne. Born in 1865, the nephew of King Carol of Rou-mania, Ferdinand was designated by the Roumanian senate in 1899 the crown prince and heir to the throne. The selection was approved later by the Roumanian cham-ber of deputies.

Ferdinand was the hand-picked selection of a coterie of politicians who, at the end of the nineteenth century, were in power in Rou-mania, and during the years prior to his accession to the throne was dominated completely by these politicians. This domination fol-lowed Ferdinand through his years as reigning sovereign and was one of the unhappy influences in his life.

Prince Carol, who renounced his rights to the Roumanian throne to reside in Paris, said recently of King Ferdinand:

"My father, when he was made heir to the throne, was never al-lowed to think for himself, and even to this day he takes long times in making decisions, for he is inclined to ponder and consult."

Prince Ferdinand married Prin-cess Marie of Sax-Coburg and Gotha January 10, 1893, and thus contracted another dominating in-fluence. It has been no secret that the queen has been one of the strongest forces behind the Rou-manian throne since Ferdinand's and her accession on October 11, 1914.

The king's rule has been fraught with internal strife and dissension, and the first four years of his

FREE PRISONER ON SHOOTING CHARGE

B. F. Miller, 65, Bath Twp., charged with shooting with intent to kill, received at the County Jail in June, was released upon his own recognizance Wednesday morning by Common Pleas Judge R. L. Gowdy, pending considera-tion of the case by the next gen-eral jury, which will not convene in regular session until October.

Miller was bound over to the grand jury in June by a justice of the peace in Osborn.

COMMUNISTS HELD

VIENNA, July 20.—While thou-sands gathered for the funeral cer-emonies for those killed in last week's rioting, the Austrian police made a round-up today and ar-rested more than 110 Communists, charging them with inciting the uprising of Friday.

There were thirty foreigners among those arrested.

was transmitted officially. The regency council, which will rule the country during the minority of Prince Michael, is constitu-ted of Patriarch Miron, Chief Jus-tice Busdagan, of the supreme court and Princes Nicholas. How-ever it is believed here that steps will be taken to revise this council and to give Premier Bratiano and the minister of war place in the regency.

Measures are understood to have been taken to prevent the entry of Prince Carol into Roumania.

Thus far there have been no pub-lic demonstrations although crowds have gathered about the royal pal-ace in Sinaia.

Soldiers in the Bucharest garri-son are being held in quarters in the event of an emergency.

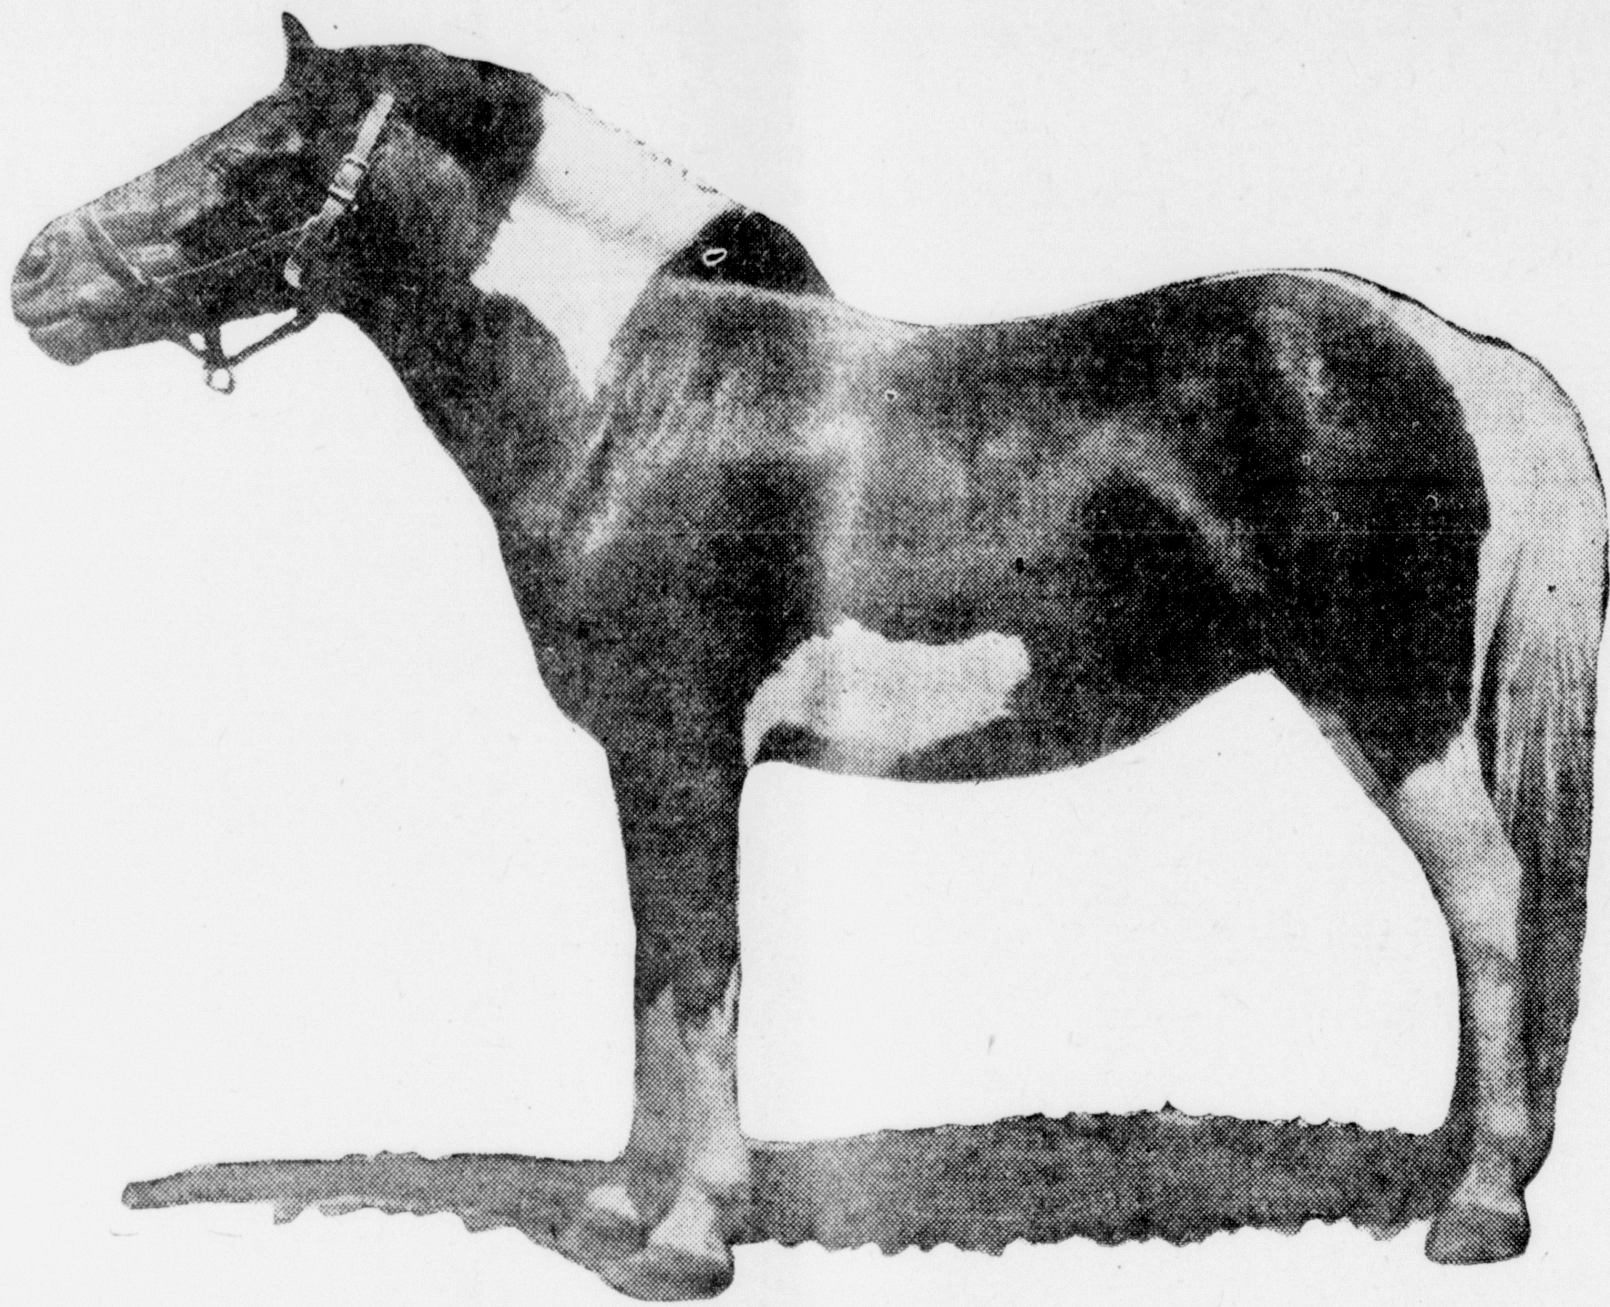

Only two of the Bucharest news-papers issued extra editions on the king's death. The Dimineaza and Universul issued extras announcing the death of the king and calling on the nation to give its loyalty to the new king and the regency.

The king's last official function was carried out yesterday when he conferred with Premier Bratiano and was advised that the Bratiano government had a safe majority in the new parliament.

HOME PUPILS ENJOY OUTING AS GUESTS OF CELINA LEGION

After enjoying a week's outing at Mercelina Park, Celina, where they were guests of the Celina American Legion Post, twenty-three boys between the age of seven and ten from the O. S. and S. O. Home, were returned to the institution last Sunday by Dr. Guy Bryson, Dr. T. J. Gibbons, Harold Bowman and Ray Younger.

An equal number of girls from the Home made the return trip to Celina for a week's outing at the same resort, arriving Sunday evening. Each contingent of girls was accompanied by a matron, who is assisted each day by members of the Legion and members of the women's auxiliary of the Legion. During their week's stay at the park, the Home boys made the most of their opportunities to enjoy fishing trips, swimming parties, boat rides, hikes, special dinners each day, trips on the lake in speed boats, being guests for meals at Celina hotels, theater parties, treats at confectionaries, band concerts in their honor, and a glorious day at Edgewater Park, where they "took in" all the amusement features placed at their disposal by the management during the entire day.

If it is found at a meeting of the state control board at Columbus Wednesday that eight professors and employees of the C. N. University, who lost their jobs at the spring meeting of the trustee board, were "fired" for giving testimony at an investigation of the department conducted by a Chicago detective last December, the controlling board will indefinitely withhold the $1,000,000 appropriations for the university and refuse to confirm the list of seventy employees and their salaries submitted by the trustees for approval. The meeting was scheduled to begin at 10:30 a. m. and the eight discharged officials, represented by legal counsel, were to be given a hearing.

WEDNESDAY FINAL TAX-PAYING DAY

Wednesday is the final day upon which the June installment of taxes may be paid before the property is placed on the delinquent list, according to County Treasurer Frank A. Jackson.

Tax-payers have already been given one thirty-day extension of time in which to meet their obligations, and no more consideration will be shown since it is thought sufficient leniency has already been granted.

Unkept Hands Spoil Entire Effect

Every woman should have soft, white, youthful hands to complete the picture of daintiness expected of her.

While eating, dancing, playing cards, in fact, whatever you do, your hands are noticed as much as your complexion. You can't neglect them without spoiling the impression you make by being well groomed in every other detail.

The easiest way to keep your hands soft, white and firm is to massage them with the dainty lotion you can make by simply squeezing the juice of two lemons into a bottle of Orchard White, which you can get from your nearest dealer. It clears and refines the skin, making toil-worn and stained hands look like a queen's.

His arrest was made late Tuesday afternoon at Zimmerman on the Dayton and Xenia Pike by Kenneth C. Barr, county road patrolman, and a road patrolman named Durnbaugh, working out of Dayton. Durnbaugh notified Greene County authorities to be on the lookout for Routzong and then trailed the Xenian to Zimmerman, where the two officers jointly made the arrest.

LABOR LEADERS AND PROGRESS

The United States and Great Britain have for some years been fortunate in the fact that so many "labor leaders" of both nations have been men of outstanding ability and character.

For the most part they have been, and are, progressive without being radical. They are liberal without being red.

Not that we haven't had ultra-radical leaders of the ranks of workingmen. But they have not proved their capacity for leadership in such a way as to attract men or to hold a following of importance.

The late Sam Gompers was a constructive man. He worked for and with the better forces of his government. He was intensely in earnest, not only in his ideal for improving the wages and general conditions of workingmen, but in his desire to co-operate with all the forces that would improve the status of the United States in the eyes of the world.

The present president of the American Federation of Labor, William Green, is a man of high character. And he has taste and brains. Green is progressive but he always proceeds in an orderly fashion.

For more than 30 years Green has been a member and officer of the United Mine Workers. He had a career of importance in the Ohio senate. Green is a man who is interested in the church.

The church and the American Federation of Labor do not make a bad combination.

We have many other labor leaders who are doing great work in keeping industrial conditions steady and harmonious.

Among the prime contributors to this steadiness—men who are progressive and yet keep their feet on the ground—are William P. Clarke, at the head of the International Union of Lint Glass Workers; Jim Lynch, for many years president of the International Typographical Union; George Berry, head of the pressmen.

HERRICK AND "LINDY"

Ambassador Herrick, who has just left Washington after a brief official visit, pending another sojourn in September before he goes to Paris, was left in no doubt of the administration's appreciation of his "Lindbergh diplomacy." In addition to bouquets from the state department, Mr. Herrick has been showered with compliments from all parts of the country. Many persons singled out the ambassador's messages to Mrs. Lindbergh: "Your incomparable son is sleeping tonight under Uncle Sam's roof," and to the president telling of French appreciation of Mr. Coolidge's Lindbergh cablegram as Herrick's outstanding acts. There's a myth that American diplomats are only super-messenger boys, who are supposed never to be guilty of initiative. Ambassador Herrick knocked this theory into a cocked hat when, wholly on his own account, he took "Lindy" under official wing at Paris and paved the way for the most striking episode in recent Franco-American diplomatic history.

The Way of the World

By Grove Patterson.
IT'S IN THE MIND

There is no obscenity in nature. Obscenity is a mental condition. So says Erskine, professor of English in Columbia University, and author of best sellers. Custom officials have been holding up shipments of unpurged, important books. Distortion is dangerous. Truth is not. Bitter, unaltered caricatures of the sort that some so-called American realists write, are unjust, untrue, harmful.

As to books that really set forth life as it is, that paint human tendencies truly, it is often the mind of the censor and not the book that is dirty.

DRIFTING TOWARD WAR

Nations rarely plunge into war. They drift toward war. Too much emphasis on preparation for war starts the drift. Military for exercise are well enough. Compulsory military training in schools and colleges is wrong. The maintenance of a reasonable navy at the present stage of the world's temper is not to be hastily condemned. Any undue preparation for war helps to keep international peace from becoming a reality.

You can't bring up children and young men on military drills and not expect them to give impetus to the drift toward war.

MAN A FIGHTER

The fact is man is a natural fighter. He has fought his way up and out through the ages. The reason he goes to war is not so much because he is pushed into it by diplomats and propagandists. The principal reason is that he loves fighting. He has been developed in conflict. What are we going to do about that? Whatever we do, we have to begin far down in youth.

Did you READ it?

Here are six questions dealing with news events of the past few days which have been reported in The Evening Gazette and The Morning Republican. Can you answer them accurately? If you can, you may claim credit as a really intelligent reader; but if you fail, that means you merely skim the news, as so many people do. Answers on Classified Page.

1. What great European city has recently been tied up by a general strike, requiring the action of troops to end it?
2. In what country was an American marine recently killed in a battle between government troops and native revolutionists?
3. Two internationally famous prisoners have gone on a hunger strike in an American prison. What are their names?
4. What leading figure in American politics has recently declared himself not a candidate for the presidential nomination in 1928?
5. A central figure in a nationally notorious murder case has been sentenced to prison for life after a jury found him guilty. Give his name, and the office he previously held.
6. What understanding between two of the three nations participating in the Geneva naval disarmament conference has recently made it appear that a basis for general agreement will soon be reached?

Many Minds SIGNIFICANT SAYINGS OF THE DAY

"The accord for equal forces at Washington referred to capital ships, and after that no agreement was reached. Everybody could build what they liked. We think the best standard is the needs of a country. Let the powers state what they want and reach an agreement. Let it rest with the nations. We do not dispute the American claim for parity, but we sometimes ask ourselves if the needs of Great Britain and the United States are exactly the same, and if each is subject to the same reasons for wanting certain types of ships." —Walter C. Bridgman, British first lord of the admiralty.

KELLYGRAMS by Fred C. Kelly

IS STROLLING TO BE LOST ART?

Whenever I start to walk anywhere, somebody is sure to try to stop me.

If on a country road, I can't go 100 yards before a well-meaning automobilist offers to give me a lift. I never have the heart to tell him that I'm walking from choice. And in the city, if I set out alone, friends begin to tell me where to look for the nearest subway station.

Because traffic is a nuisance, most people have formed new habits and seem unwilling to walk except under extreme provocation. They don't walk voluntarily even late at night when streets are quiet.

The worst of this is not merely that we shall miss needed exercise but that we shall lose our sense of appreciation for one of the most charming of activities—aimless strolling. And if we don't walk for the sole purpose of looking at things, we shall lose much of our powers of observation. Who really observes much when riding swiftly in an automobile? The faster you go, the less you see.

But strolling along city streets and looking into shop windows is an ideal amusement for those of us who have no talent for more competitive exercises. Have you ever observed that no matter how long or how busy a street is, no two blocks are ever alike?

No shop window, no matter how commonplace, is ever uninteresting if you give your natural curiosity a chance. In the course of a long walk last night, I stood for a time in front of a shoe store. How many men, I wondered still wear button shoes? Why do most men seem to prefer so much fancy work on golf shoes?

Next to the shoe store was an antique shop. I noticed a little blue glass hat suitable for holding matches or toothpicks. It doesn't seem long since just such devices were sold in the famous Cheap Store, in my native town for a dime. Gracious, I must be getting old—constantly seeing objects, once in familiar everyday use, now antique, rare, or expensive!

Well, I must continue my stroll.

Answers to Correspondents GOOD WORK

"Dear Doctor Lulu: About this time last year I met one of your followers and she told me she had reduced from 211 to 170—11 pounds. She looked so fine and said she felt so well, that on that day I sent for your instructions. I now weigh 165 pounds—a loss of 50 pounds—which will never come back, if I know it. I haven't gained any since I lost, and I feel and look ten years younger. A new woman! And I lost my hay fever and other disorders with the fat. I can get clothes to fit me! I'm five feet seven inches tall, thirty-three years old. Do you think 165 is too much for me? I look so well that all of my fat friends are converted, and are going to begin to diet. —MRS. Z."

According to the rule of 110 pounds for five feet in height (without shoes), and five and a half pounds for each inch over that, you should weigh around 150, without your clothing. Mrs. Z., as you have a bathroom scale, your 165 pounds is evidently without clothes, and it is fifteen pounds above the average. However, the fact that you feel and look so well, and haven't gained any since you stopped dieting, would indicate that 165 pounds was around the best weight for you. We do allow 5 to 10 per cent above, or below this weight, for the heaviness of the bones and the general build.

It is certainly a joy to be able to get clothes of normal sizes, I know. I never will forget how thrilled I was when I was looking at some dresses and took one off the rack, and the saleslady said: "That wouldn't do for you; it's a large size."

Enough importance cannot be attached to this mental rejuvenation that comes with reducing to normal size. It means not only increased happiness from looking so much better, but there really is an increased mental efficiency.

You were wise in taking ten months to reduce your fifty pounds, Mrs. Z. That is an average of only five pounds a month, or one and one-fourth pounds a week, and see how much it has accomplished! There's no doubt that your food tastes have changed considerably, haven't they?

Please write us again and tell us if you are keeping up your exercises, and any other points that might help someone else? (The directions on reducing and gaining can be obtained by sending a fully self-addressed stamped envelope and 2 cents in stamps.)

The Tomato Do you like tomatoes? If you don't, it would be a good idea to learn to like them. For the tomato is one of the grandest fruits we have. (Yes, while we commonly think of tomatoes as a vegetable, botanically they are a fruit.)

This is why they are so grand; they are very high in all of the vitamins, and because of the acidity, these vitamins are retained even after cooking, drying or canning. The acid is the malic acid similar to the acid in apples, and it is bound with alkaline salts, so when it is oxidized, the alkaline salts help to keep the tissue fluids and blood in their normal alkalinity.

It doesn't seem possible now that the tomato used to be looked upon as poisonous and a cause of cancer. There was absolutely no foundation to base these calumnies upon. At any rate, it has come into its own now, for Sherman states that over 200,000,000 cans are put up for consumption each year by the factories.

Tomato juice is just as good for the anti-scurbutic vitamin as is orange juice, and can be used for the baby when oranges are too expensive, to prevent scurvy. Another nice little thing about the tomato is that on account of its high content of water, it is low in calories, and therefore is a good little standby for those who are trying to reduce. One pound—three or four medium—is only 100 C., sixteen of which are protein. The same weight of the canned—one and three-fourths cups—is also 100 C. Canned tomato soups, because they are concentrated and have a little fat in them, you have to count 100 C. to the seven ounces. One of the best condiments we have is tomato ketchup, because it is concentrated, that averages also about seven ounces to the 100 C.

Tomorrow—Answers to Correspondents.

How to Achieve Beauty by MME. HELENA RUBENSTEIN

Colors And Cosmetics For The Brunette

If you are of medium brunette type with a pale olive or clear skin, dark or black hair, you can indulge to your heart's content in a full range of the following colors, as they will best enhance your natural your natural colors: red, orange, green that is not too dark, dark blue, warm brown, light tan blue green, dark tan and brownish gray cream white, dark red, purple and pink. The shades you should avoid are yellow, yellow green, blue, purple, pastel tints and black.

As to your make-up, it will vary according to the color of your frock but a safe choice for the true brunette is to use a powder the same shade or one that is slightly darker than the natural color of your skin. If you have a deep toned or olive complexion the deeper shades of powder such as rachel or mauvesque will best enhance your beauty.

To achieve that enviable "mat" tone, you should precede the use of your powder with an application of snow lotion, skin toning lotion or foundation cream. Any one of these will make the powder doubly adherent. For summer, it is well to use a foundation lotion or cream containing sunproof ingredients as they also act as a protection against the harmful effects of sun and wind.

The rouge and lipstick for you brunettes should be considerably darker in tone than those used by your blonde sisters. A safe choice for you is a shade very much like that of red raspberries. This shade is becoming to most women of the brunette type and is wisely used. Your lipstick should match the tone of your rouge.

Little Old New York

NEW YORK, July 20.—A woman told me a funny incident that she witnessed recently. She was sitting in the women's rest room at Grand Central station, when all of sudden a great clatter and bub-bub arose.

Sacrilege of sacrilege! No less than a man, a male person, a blip in trousers, was storming the sacred gates. Women stood up excitedly from the couches and sort of shushed him with their extended palms, motioning to him to retreat. The poor fellow knew the ticklish situation in which he had placed himself, and he blushed furiously. Middle aged, respectable, and a little bald, this must have been torture to him.

Finally the matron came out of an inner room and began to berate him indignantly for his conduct. The poor man stammeringly explained that his wife was sure she had left an umbrella in the room, and ordered him to stop in and see if it was found. The matron said she would look for it and requested him to wait outside. Whether he got the umbrella I do not know.

Walking through City Hall park, I noticed a large group of people gathered, apparently looking at a salesman's wares, or at someone who had fainted from the heat.

Entering the crowd, I could see nothing but an old shriveled colored woman sitting there. Everyone was staring at her. She wore a black dress with fringe spread all over it, an ordinary Turkish towel pinned down the front of her dress and one of those small black bonnets. She held a black silk fringed umbrella above her head.

Enraged by the number of people staring at her so steadily, the old lady would, from time to time, break into a storm of denunciation. "What you all lookin' at?" she asked. "Can't you blank blank blank so-and-sos leave an old lady alone?"

Then she would fall to counting the change in a small purse she held, complaining that she had lost some money.

No one in the crowd seemed to have the least idea what they were looking at her for. They simply remained because everybody else did. Finally, some bold fellow shoved the mob into breaking up. They slowly drifted apart under his biting words of scorn.

The thing that still puzzles me is how the crowd first started. Was it by one of those practical jokers who like to start pedestrians peering upwards? Or was the old lady really doing something diverting before I got there? For as I saw her, she appeared simply as one of the eccentric characters in the park, taking a short rest. At any rate, it was clear that had the old woman fallen asleep there would have continued to be a crowd watching her for hours, if someone did not appear to disperse them.

Yesterday I observed a very tall negro, nattily dressed in golf knickerbocks, colored sweater and bright hose, standing on upper Broadway, gazing aimlessly about, with an American Mercury in his hand.

Never until today have I seen a foreign-built car used as a meter-taxi in New York. I saw a smart little Citroen glide down Broadway, all rigged out as a hack, and bearing the conventional 15c/14—5c/14 sign on it. The Citroen is a car made in France, which corresponds to the native Ford, except that it is built to wear longer than a Ford. It is very light and gets extraordinary mileage. At one time a fleet of these cars, equipped with caterpillar treads, crossed the Sahara desert on some sort of scientific expedition.

Saw Paul Whiteman and his wife getting into a cab on Forty-third street. Mrs. Whiteman, who is Vanda Hoff on the stage, is appearing as a dancer in her husband's act at the Paramount. Mr. Whiteman doesn't seem to lose weight. With him aviordupis is an asset; it makes him a good subject for caricaturists and the caricatures are good publicity.

Do you know that you cannot buy a newspaper on Fifth avenue? That the charge is 50 cents a person to go up into the Woolworth tower? That there is no public telephone north of Forty-second street on Fifth avenue? That there is no cigar store on Fifth avenue north of Forty-second street? That apartments rent for as high as $5,000 a month on Park avenue?

Are you fighting against middle-age?

ONE OF the most critical periods of a woman's life comes between 45 and 50. Most women dread the approach of middle-age because they know, only too well, the depressing ailments it brings.

The best preparation for this period a woman can have is a good physical condition. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help her to gain strength and energy. It builds up the appetite and induces natural sleep. The following letters were written by women of middle-age.

AFTER LONG SUFFERING

South Omaha, Nebraska.—"After fifteen years of terrible suffering each month with sick headaches I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I have felt my health steadily improving. After taking your medicine for almost a year and a half, I believe I can say the headaches have left me. I also was troubled with nervousness. I am feeling fine now and do all my work myself. I am the mother of six, and manage an eight-room house without anybody to help. I feel that I am entirely well. Mrs. Adolph Bratke, 4316 South 13th St., So. Omaha, Nebraska.

Remember this package. None genuine without the signature of Lydia E. Pinkham.

MRS. BOLLERMAN'S CASE

West Hoboken, N. J.—"I was troubled with headaches, weakness, flushes of heat to the face and head and loss of appetite. I would often get so weak I could hardly stand. I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and began to take the medicine. After the first few bottles I began to feel stronger and could eat better and had fewer headaches. I am a well woman today, and feel like a different person. You may use this letter for every word is true. I will answer any letters sent to me." Mrs. Jennie Bollerman, 611 E. Leventh St., Union City, New Jersey.

QUEEN OF THE KITCHEN

I AM the queen of my kitchen, The giver of rules and laws. My wrath therein makes the mighty Humble themselves and pause, Meek and hushed are my people When I am preparing food. And whether they flee or enter Depends on my whim and my mood.

I am a queen in the kitchen, As dishes, Olympian, brown, Some of my loyal subjects Would swear that I wear a crown.

Over the pans and the kettles, Over the table and stove, My rolling-pin for a sceptre, I am a female Jove!

DOLLAR FINANCIAL YARDSTICK OF WORLD DECLARES LECTURER

"The American dollar is the financial yardstick of the world today," declared Ralph Parlette, humorist philosopher, just returned from a world tour, in a community talk, "Swat the Snake," before a large audience at the Chautauqua Tuesday night.

"This is because the pledge of the American people to work co-operatively stands back of it," he explained.

"There are just three kinds of pay in this world. God's pay, man's pay and money pay. God's pay is the natural resources He has placed at our disposal. Man's pay is the co-operation that brings them to us, while money is not actually a pay, it is a tip."

Speaking about government, the speaker asserted that to give the Philippines their independence now, would be like "giving a razor to a baby before its whiskers had sprouted." "They are just getting started," he went on to say.

"We are gradually disfranchising ourselves. Ever since the administration of Abraham Lincoln, our citizenship has not been functioning."

"We have just two kinds of business, public and private business, and it is far more important to look after our public business."

Mr. Parlette spoke in Xenia exactly thirty years ago at the Opera House and declared that since this time, our lives have been revised, revolutionized.

Preceding the lecture, the Conservatory Artists, with Edgar Sprague, tenor, delighted with another vocal and instrumental program.

The Chautauqua comes to a close Wednesday night. In the afternoon, Jackson's Jungle Jubilee singers present a concert, followed by an address by Major John J. Hill, on the subject, "With Cecil Rhodes in Africa."

The world experiences of this interesting adventurer include eight years with Cecil Rhodes in Africa. He tells a thrilling story of primitive life on the "dark continent," of the witch doctors, and of his experiences in the building of the Cape Town to Cairo railroad.

Under the direction of Robert G. Jackson, and featuring Van Ray Osborn, aged 9, the Jungle Jubilee will offer an historical musical production at the closing evening performance, showing the development of the colored race from primitive days, through the period of slavery, up to the present.

There will be some special costumes, and two complete stage sets will be used.

The Theatre

George M. Cohan is bemoaning the passing of that "broad, raucous, glittering thoroughfare," that one time was Broadway. "Broadway? You mean Main St., don't you?" he asked a recent interviewer. "We used to have a Broadway, but the world has been moving so fast of late years, somebody mislaid it in the excitement."

"I walked over from Park Ave., the other night just by way of curiosity. I hadn't seen Broadway in three or four months, and I tried to make myself think, hopefully, if fearfully, that maybe the old street had fallen back to its accustomed haunts while I'd been away, but it hadn't."

"It was like viewing the home town a quarter of a century later and seeing a stand for taxis on the spot where the town pump used to be. Someone touched me on the arm as I stood there. 'Pardon me,' he said, 'can you tell me where—?' There wasn't any use letting him finish. Sorry, I told him, I'm a stranger here myself. Then I went back to my hotel. Broadway was just Main St., full of collar shops, orangeade stands and movie theaters."

SWAT FEST ENABLES RESERVES TO RAISE AVERAGE WITH CLUB

The record-breaking total of twenty-three hits collected by the Reserves in the alleged baseball game last Sunday, served to raise the team's hitting average for the season to a mark of .342, an increase of thirteen percentage points.

Reserves have now won thirteen games and dropped two but have anything but a soft snap in prospect Sunday when the Richmond, Ind. nine appears here.

In the fifteen games this season, Reserves have been to bat 546 times, scored 156 runs and made 187 hits. This is an average of ten runs and twelve hits per contest. Batting records follow:

FIVE FOR A QUARTER

That's All It Costs to Buy Good Cigars Today. Smokers Everywhere Enthusiastic

It seems out of the question to some smokers—but the sober truth is that there is a good cigar now selling at 5c. It sold at more than a nickel for years. It became so popular that the makers put the price down to five cents. And improved the quality. Sales mounted. Men like it because it is mild, fragrant and satisfying as only ripe tobacco can be. Millions are sold.

Yet some smokers hold back. They can't quite believe in any cigar selling at 5c, no matter how well it's established. If you're an unbeliever you're standing in your own light. Ask for "Havana Ribbon" and produce a nickel. Then, put on the work with that cigar. Smoke it fast or slowly. Notice its aroma, mildness, sweetness. Notice how it satisfies you without leaving you fed up. You'll bank on Havana Ribbon from then on.

POSTPONE QUIT GAME WITH N. C. R.

By a joint agreement of both clubs, the scheduled Miami Valley Quoit League match between Xenia and the N. C. R. of Dayton, scheduled for Monday night, July 25 at Dayton, has been postponed until August 8, due to the vacation period at the N. C. R. plant.

This postponement was provided for when the schedule was originally drawn up.

Rather than force a claim for a forfeit of the eighteen games, Xenia will probably play off its postponed match with the Dayton Eastwood Club on the local courts Friday night. The match has twice been postponed by Dayton.

Enough to make a pipe get puffed up

IF YOUR jimmy-pipe could talk, it would say: "Fill me with Prince Albert and watch me strut. I'll repay you a hundred-fold." No doubt about it, many a pipe has been blamed for things that weren't its fault at all. You have no idea how well a pipe behaves on P.A.

On my say-so, buy yourself a tidy red tin of good old P.A. today. Throw back the hinged lid and revel in that fragrance of the world's greatest pipe-tobacco, bar none. Then tuck a neat wad into the business-end of your pipe and light up. There's the answer to every pipe-wish.

Cool as a pound-keeper. Sweet as escape from the place he keeps. Mild, but with that full, satisfying flavor of the greatest tobacco that ever tumbled into a pipe. No matter how wide you open the smoke-throttle, there isn't a stop-sign or a detour anywhere.

Nearby is a store where they hand out jimmy-pipe joy in tidy red tins. My advice to you is to make tracks for there at once. Fill your pipe with this glorious tobacco and get the fun that's due you. No matter what your present program is, try P.A. Give your pipe a chance!

PRINCE ALBERT

—no other tobacco is like it!

P. A. is sold everywhere in tidy red tins, pound and half-pound tin humidors, and pound crystal-glass humidors with sponge-moistener top. And always with every bit of bite and punch removed by the Prince Albert process.

WILE SAYS:

Japanese came along with suggestions and schemes that were acceptable neither to the Americans nor the British. The United States and Japan have been nearer on more fundamental points than Uncle Sam and John Bull have been able to get. In particular, the Washington government has discerned in most of Japan's moves a desire to bring about limitation of auxiliary ships quite as sincere and keen as President Coolidge's own desire in convening the conference. Yet even the Tokyo authorities have sent up a couple of balloons at Geneva, as unattractive to America as Great Britain's undebatable cruiser plans. For instance, the Japanese suggestion of a separate treaty with the United States to outlaw war in the Pacific was one of the first "unofficial" maneuvers at the conference. This week
there were some similar "feelers," apparently of joint Anglo-Japanese origin, suggesting that if America couldn't obtain a three-power treaty at Geneva, we might consider individual limitation treaties with Britain and Japan.

The project to give Ambassador
Gibson, Mr. Bridgman, Viscount Saito and their respective advisory staffs a vacation of two weeks is based on the belief at Washington that very hot diplomatic weather has set in at the conference. Temperatures have risen, patience now and then has bordered on exhaustion, and even the professional naval experts seem to have become enmeshed in a hopeless maze of figures. Confusion has not been confined to Geneva.
It has notoriously spread to Washington, and one of the reasons a fourth adjournment appeals to American officials is that it would permit them to clarify a number of issues which have become beclouded. As things now stand, vitally important proposals from one side or another are put forth today and have to be considered almost immediately, leaving frequently far too little time for cable communication with home
capitals as remote as Washington and Tokyo. London being separate ly near, can pass upon proposals or counter with others more ex-pediently than the United States and Japan can do. But the conference has dragged along ineffectively just enough days and weeks to show that some other kind of machinery is needed if the parley is not to go to smash.

President Coolidge is known to lay the utmost store by a successful outcome at Geneva. He is conscious that the prestige of the United States is at stake, and he is genuinely anxious for an agreement in the general cause of world peace, from a strictly domestic standpoint, success would be of undoubted political value to the administration. The Republican party made the Washington conference of 1921-22 a major issue in the 1924 presidential campaign. Charles E. Hughes personally prepared the impressive story of the conference that featured the Coolidge and Dawes textbook three years ago. Naturally, the Republicans would like to make similar capital out of Mr. Cool-idge's achievement in completing at Geneva the work left undone at Washington in the field of naval limitation.

Diplomatic quarters are ringing with praise of Ambassador Gibson. Even some of those who six years ago were clamoring for the dispatch of "big Americans" to Geneva, instead of merely meritorious "career men," now concede that Hugh Gibson has given a splendid account of himself over there. Fears that he might have the diplomatic wool pulled over his relatively young eyes by old-sta-gers like Cecil, of Great Britain, and Saito, of Japan, are no longer heard.

JAMESTOWN

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Christopher
(Catherine Harnett) of New York City, are visiting the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Christopher. They spent a week in Columbia, O., with Mrs. Christopher's sister, Mrs. Carl King and family and with her uncle and aunt,
Prof. and Mrs. George Harnett.
Mr. Christopher has been granted a two weeks' vacation by his company, the Western Electric of New York City. They motored through and his father and mother will accompany them home for a visit of a few weeks and will be the guests of Mrs. J. B. Christopher and fam-

Do You Have
These Symptoms?

Folks Near or Past Forty Should Watch These Danger Signs.

Dizziness, headaches, shortness of breath, distress after eating,
gas in stomach and bowels, pressure or sharp pains in right side that often shoot through to the back, coated tongue, bad breath,
lack of ambition, weakness, nervousness and nights of restless misery caused by bad dreams or inability to sleep—these are some of "The Danger Signals" indicating hepatic torpidity, gall stones or gall bladder inflammation.
Thousands of lives have been wrecked and other thousands made thoroughly miserable because they did not heed these warning signs in time. Women in their "forties" are particularly liable to these troubles and many dread who think they have high blood pressure are simply suffering from hepatic torpidity or gall bladder inflammation.
Don't take a chance on gall stones and don't let your system get filled with poison that may cause months or even years of miserable ill health. At the very first warning sign, ask Sayre's Drug Store or any other good drugstore for "Klax-Ko" tablets and be assured of swift and positive relief or your money promptly refunded. Klax-Ko tablets have brought new life and health to hundreds who thought they had some dangerous internal trouble—
and in many instances have saved
the pain and expense of an operation for gall stones. Ten days will convince you of their honest value in your particular case.

days and will return home later.

On Friday afternoon, Margaret Hopkins and Mary Sutton were hostesses to the members of the

the home of the former. After the members going into camp at El-other Greene County clubs, was also discussed. The result in

The Rovin' Ritzies

By Flo Frederick

Will Fluffy like her new nest?

This is the important test. "It sure is lucky this tree had a big branch close to the ground, isn't it?" Rag.

"I wouldn't have tried to build it around a perfectly straight tree," answered Marty.

"I don't yet see just how you are going to manage it," said Rag, a little doubtfully.

Marty had undertaken the task of building a tree-house for Fluffy, their bushy-tailed squirrel, and though he insisted that it wouldn't be hard to make, the rest of the Ritzies were still a little doubtful that it could even be done.

Taking charge of things, and giving orders to each of every one of his five helpers, Marty wasn't long in getting things under way. They first built a square frame around the base of the tree, making it the size they wanted the tree-house to be. The four up-rights were then joined at the top with a similar square framework. Of course the top and bottom that I could use the scraps of lumber to make it."

Betty Ann sighed happily. Marty could always be counted on to think of everything. How happy she would be when they could turn Fluffy-tail loose in her tree-house instead of keeping her in that old box covered with wire. Of course the squirrel had gotten very tame, being cooped up in the box, but she was sure that it was longing for a nice tree to climb.

"Well, I guess Fluffy-tail's bungalow is almost ready," said Marty. As chief carpenter, he had completed his job and Patsy was now giving the wooden strips a pretty coat of green paint. "Even a squirrel's house must be painted," was Patsy's argument when the boys had said it wouldn't need it. Before putting on the little hinged door, Marty had built a rain shelter in one corner of the house. The Ritzies didn't know whether or not squirrels liked to be out in the rain, but Betty Ann had insisted that Fluffy-tail wouldn't like frames had to be the same size when finished so that the screen wire would stretch smoothly from top to bottom. They braced the uprights with cross-pieces about two and a half feet from the ground. The top of the frame measured exactly five feet.

"I guess we are ready to put on the screen wire," he announced, standing back to look at the finished framework.

"That will be a job," said Bill. "You're all afraid of work," kidded Marty. "All we have to do is cut it to fit the frames and tack it on. I'll put in the corner tacks and the rest of you can draw it tight and put in tacks every inch or so along the frames."

"How are we going to be able to feed Fluffy-tail?" asked Betty Ann. "You'll have him all screened in."

"Oh, no I won't," laughed Marty. "That's why I left that front square till last. I'll have to make a little hinged door that will fit in to a wooden frame. I wanted to get everything else done first so to get her pretty red fur wet, so Marty had built a little three-cornered roof that the squirrel could snuggle under when it rained.

"Oh, I wonder if she will like it," cried Betty Ann, excitedly, as the boys carried the pet squirrel over to the tree-house in its cage.

The boys set the cage up against the open door of the tree-house, and no sooner had Fluffy-tail seen the tree than she made one leap through the doorway and scampered up the trunk. When she came to the screen wire at the top, she scarcely knew what to do, as this was the first tree that she hadn't been able to climb to the very tip.

But there was so much for her to explore that she didn't seem to mind the screen wire that snuffed off this and sniffed at that, and seemed to find the little three-cornered roof very nice.

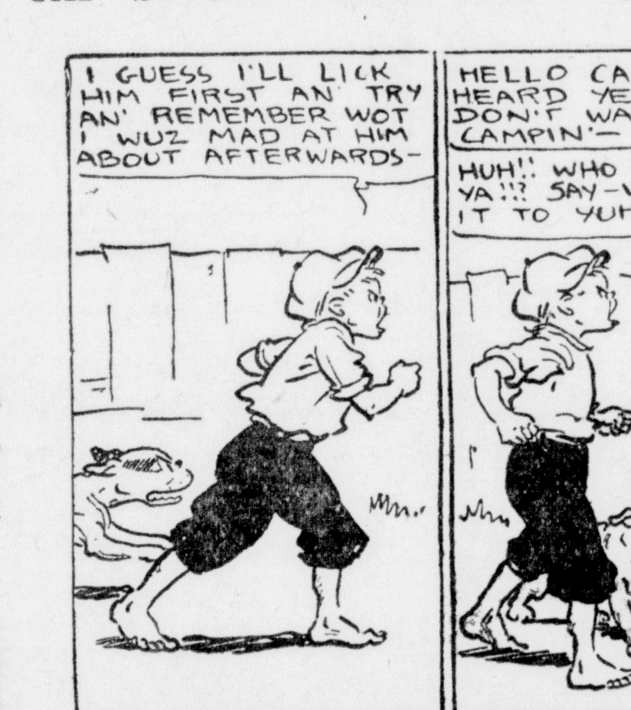

When the Ritzies left her to go in to supper, she was contentedly perched in the hollow of the tree, looking very much at home in her little tree-house.

Sally's Shoulders

by BEATRICE BURTON, Author of "HER MAN MONEY LOU THE HOLLYWOOD GIRL" ETC.

CHAPTER XV.

Aunt Emily came popping into the flat that night between 8 and 9.

"I just had a feeling that something was wrong here," she said to Sally, when she heard about Mrs. Jerome's attack.

Aunt Emily had an uncanny way of suspecting when things were not going smoothly with the Jeromes. She had a nose for misfortune, and she could scent bad luck from afar—the way some people can tell when a storm is coming.

"You wouldn't be sick like this if you weren't so lary, and didn't make such a pig of yourself at meals," she snapped at her sister-in-law, when she went in to see her.

Mrs. Jerome only groaned and turned her head to the wall. She was no match for Aunt Emily, and she had sense enough to know it.

"Yes, and you can groan and moan and all but ask me to get out!" went on Aunt Emily, with a nod of her head. "But I'm not going until I've said my say—and I tell you that you're going to die in one of these attacks some day unless you stop over-eating the way you do!"

Mrs. Jerome rolled over in bed and turned up beseeching eyes to Sally. "Must I listen to all this?" she asked, helplessly. "Can't you get her out and make her stay out? I'm too sick to listen to her."

"You have to hear the truth—that's all that ails you!" was Aunt Emily's parting shot.

But later, when smart young Dr. Ambler came, he said much the same thing that Aunt Emily had said.

"She has another of her attacks of acute indigestion—at least, that's how it looks to me," he told the anxious Sally. "I've been telling her for years that she eats too much and doesn't move around enough."

Mrs. Jerome stared at him silently. There was intense fury in her face and she did not say "Good night" to him when he left. She hated to be told that she ate too much.

"You don't look so well yourself," the doctor told Sally on his way out, bag and hat in hand. "Overworking, aren't you?"

Sally shook her head as she looked at him. Her blue eyes were clouded with the heat, her face was white under the soft damp rings of her hair.

"Indeed I'm not," she said. "You see, I only worked a half day down town. I'm just around home the rest of the time."

He said nothing. But he went away with a vision of her tired face with lines of strain around the lovely mouth, and of the small work roughened hand that held out his five-dollar fee to him.

He guessed more about her than she knew.

Once in his life, at least, every man makes a fool of himself over a woman.

And that was exactly what John Nye was doing over little Millie Jerome.

Sally knew it the minute she saw them enter the flat together that Saturday night.

She had been nodding over her mending basket and had not heard them come up the stairs and unlock the door. But suddenly they were in the room with her—Millie radiant in the lamplight and John Nye, darkly handsome, looking at her as if she were the only thing in the world for him.

Her heart seemed to give a great throb in her breast and then stand still as she caught that glance. But she gave no outward sign of what she felt.

"Well, if I'd known you were bringing Mr. Nye up I'd have changed my dress, Mill," she said, looking at them both with her natural sweetness of expression.

"Won't you—would you like some lemonade? I'll make some."

"She started up from her chair. Her whole impulse was to escape—to get away, in her old cap and apron, to the kitchen where she told Millie in airy white, with her soft little snowflake of a hand on John Nye's coat-sleeve, made her feel like Cinderella, all at once.

The familiar kitchen seemed to welcome her—to twinkle at her comfortably—when she went out to crack ice and squeeze lemons into the old glass pitcher.

"You look a perfect sight!" she told her reflection in the mirror over the sink. "But what's the difference, John Nye doesn't know you're on earth tonight!"

Millie was perched on the arm of John Nye's chair when she returned to the lamplit living room. She was trying to make his cigarette lighter work, and he was watching her with that same intense look in his eyes.

"Let me show you how to do it," he was saying, and he covered her little fingers with his hand, as he showed her how to strike a light to his cigarette.

"Have a smoke?" he asked, offering her his case.

Millie smoked constantly, but now she shook her gleaming head. "Little Millie never smokes," she said in her best baby-talk, and even that didn't seem to disgust John Nye.

On the other hand, it seemed to charm and amuse him. "He's pretty far gone," said Sally to herself, as she watched him, and she thought was dull agony to her.

She picked up Millie's coat and hat and started out of the room once more. This time she was not going to come back, she firmly made up her mind.

"Where's Mommie?" asked Millie, who never spoke lovingly of her mother unless there was a man around to listen to her.

Sally's eyes widened. "Why, she's in bed, of course," she answered. "You know she was sick when I left her this afternoon."

Millie shook her head. "Why, no, darling. You've got your dates mixed. She was all right this afternoon," she fibbed smoothly and convincingly. "Otherwise I'd never have left the house."

She smiled straight down into John Nye's eyes. "Not even with you?" she said. "Mother always comes first with me. She always has."

And, leaving that brazen untruth to rot in its work, she awayed out of the room like a tall lily blown in a breeze. John Nye's dark eyes followed her hungrily.

Sally saw that before she got out of the room—just how, she never knew.

But presently she was in the rear hall, on her way to the bedroom at the back. There was a light in it, and Millie was standing before the dresser, carefully outlining her soft mouth with lipstick.

"I thought you were going in to see how mother was," Sally said to her, and her voice was cold.

Millie looked bored. "Oh, don't be silly," she answered calmly. "I know there's nothing really the matter with her. She just stuffs herself, and then her tummy aches. I told her so this afternoon when she was ripping all over the place in the world for him."

Then she turned and looked at Sally. "Tell me lovely, have I too much red on my mouth?"

She swung around lightly, her skirts billowing out from her slender hips and softly closed the bedroom door. Then she dived into the pockets of the white coat and showed Sally what she had brought home from her evening with John Nye.

"Honey, his pockets are just full of ralloping dollars," she whispered joyfully. "He just doesn't know how to spend enough money. I forgot my vanity case and he stopped in at a jewelry store and bought me this! Isn't it lovely?"

"It was a silver vanity case. A square one with a compartment for cigarettes and matches, and cunning little rouge and powder puffs."

"Too bad I forgot my own, isn't it?" drawled Millie, and she winked one of her heavenly blue eyes.

"Too bad—yee weekum!"

"Yee Weekum," was Millie's way of saying "Yes, indeed!"

The next morning Sally held a family council at the breakfast table over the coffee and the chopped apple cake.

"I've got to have some money from you two this week," she said, looking gravely from Beau to Millie.

They both looked back at her wordlessly. They always were sulky and silent in the morning when they first got up.

It was fully three minutes before Beau growled that there was n't any use in asking him for money just then.

"I owed most of my salary this week before I got it," he explained. "And then I took Mabel out to eat last night—and she sure can murder the menu. That meal made a ten dollar bill look like a postage stamp."

He grinned suddenly, and took his fifth large piece of apple cake that Sally had bought with her own money.

Then he nodded at Millie, cross-looking and rosy as a baby, on the other side of the table.

"Why don't you ask Jessie James, the girl bandit, to lend you some?" he asked Sally. "She can borrow some from that new boss of hers who's got such a crush on her."

"Borrow!" repeated Sally. "Borrow! Why you and Millie don't have to borrow from anybody. You make plenty—and all I ask you to do is to give me ten dollars every week. But I can't get you to do it, somehow."

Millie set her mouth firmly. "I'll give you my ten when Beau gives you his," she declared. "And not one minute sooner!"

There was a long silence, broken by the drowsy buzz of a fly above the sunny table and the distant sound of church bells.

Beau got up abruptly and went out of the room.

His voice came back to them, sharp and strained. "Oh, my lord, I wish you'd stop talking about money! If you don't I'm going to go crazy!"

Millie stared at Sally in astonishment. "Well, now what's the meaning of that?" she gasped. "Has he lost his blooming mind?"

Sally shook her head. She had seen the look of anxiety on Beau's face, and she knew that he "hadn't lost his blooming mind," but was only at his wits' end about something.....About money, of course.

Money and love—they were the only things that really mattered to people, weren't they?

Money—and love. She thought of John Nye, and Millie and herself. The three of them.

BURY RIOT VICTIMS PUBLICLY; STREETS CROWDED BY PEOPLE

Industry Pauses In Tribute To Dead—City
Is Quiet

VIENNA, July 20.—Nearly 15,000 soldiers and police including the newly created gendarmerie were on duty throughout Vienna today to prevent disorders during the funeral of eighty-one Socialists who were killed during the street fighting since last Friday. There were ten other dead whose funerals were not held today in connection with the public function.

Today's public funeral was conducted by the municipality, which is under control of the Socialists.

Thousands of persons filled the streets through which the long line of hearse was to pass. The police were under orders to prevent concentrations where inflammatory speeches might be made.

Following the services the bodies were to be taken to the municipal crematorium for burning. Only members of the families of the victims, officials and the Socialists party and representatives of the Municipal government were admitted to this ceremony.

The final service was to start at 2 o'clock and all industry in the city was instructed to cease operations for fifteen minutes from that hour in tribute to the memory of the dead.

The city has returned to normal and all the workers have returned to their posts. There is little left to mark the tragic happenings of the past week save the wrecked palace of justice and the presence of soldiers and extra police in the streets.

It is estimated that the property damage caused by the rioting may reach $40,000,000.

Chancellor Seipel and his governmental colleagues are engaged in restoring political equilibrium. Whether the government will take restrictive measures against the Communists, who are held responsible for the outbreaks, is not certain.

Many of the ringleaders are in jail and will be tried in the ordinary course of events but it is unlikely that any organized move will be made against the Communist party.

Preparations are under way for the opening tomorrow of the special session of parliament.

Barr was charged in an affidavit sworn out by Al Zeiner, marshal of Jamestown, with violating the village ordinance.

ARMS CONFERENCE MARKING TIME

By MARY BLADE
Exclusive Dispatch, Copyright 1927
NEW YORK, July 20.—"It was all that silly theater manager's fault. His sense of humor sure was cramped. Now I've got to go through all the annoyance and nasty publicity of an annulment. I'm just sick about it."

Helen Wainwright, pretty, plump, and internationally famous as a swimmer sat on the front porch of her family's home at Flushing, L. I., and tugged at the border of her dainty handkerchief with nervous fingers. She was very close to tears. It had become necessary to ask Miss Wainwright if it was true that her recent marriage to G. L. Holland, theater organist of Dallas, Tex., was about to be declared null and void.

It was, Helen admitted. More-

over, she added indignantly that she was never married, "not really married, you know." She left her "husband," she said, two hours after the wedding ceremony. She has never seen him since; "and I don't want to see him," she insisted.

It all happened, Helen explained, when as a partner in Gertrude Ederle's stunt act she was touring a vaudeville circuit. The bright manager of a Dallas theater thought it would be a good publicity to announce that one of the girls was to be married to a Dallas man. Holland was picked as the bridegroom and the announcement was made from the stage.

"I don't know why I fell for it, but I did," Mrs. Holland mourned.

"I wore a ten-cent ring on my wedding ring finger, and we went through with the ceremony. Next morning it was in all the papers and people began to send me presents and congratulations, and my people were upset about it. Such a fuss! I didn't think what I was doing. I never regarded the marriage seriously."

"Holland's a nice boy, but I hardly knew him. Certainly I didn't want to marry him; or anybody else."

Oh, well! Marry in haste and annul at leisure.

OGDEN ARMOUR RALLIES

LONDON, July 20.—Favorable reports of the condition of J. Ogden Armour, were issued. It was announced that he still needed complete quiet and was unable to receive visitors.

Exclusive Dispatch, Copyright 1927

WASHINGTON, July 20.—Unless the unexpected happens and British-American-Japanese differences at Geneva are speedily ironed out, the conference may be adjourned for a period of two weeks.

Proposals to that end, if found feasible, will be made by the United States government.

The purpose would be to bring about a "cooling off" period for the overworked and occasionally overheated delegations of what have been called in Geneva dispatches "the three conflicting powers."

The fortnight's interval would be employed primarily by the delegations as an opportunity for consultation with their respective home governments, and, if possible, for compromise negotiations in Geneva. In those official Washington quarters, where the recess scheme has been under serious consideration, the impression is derived that July 20 might mark the approximate date when the United States would move the adjournment in question. If events take a turn for the better in the meantime, the proposal, of course, would be dropped.

The conference has been in session for a fraction more than three weeks. To date it has proved entirely abortive. First the British entered remonstrances and submitted counter propositions that veered far away from the original American proposals. Then the

Discussion Expected To Resume Early Next Week

GENEVA, July 20.—The Anglo-American-Japanese naval limitation conference was halted today by the absence of the British delegates, who have gone to London for a consultation with the cabinet and the admiralty. Viscount Cecil left last night and the other members of the British delegation prepared to leave today.

It is possible that the conference may resume early next week.

Great Britain and Japan had already reached an agreement "in principle" for a tentative cruiser tonnage of 500,000 for the United States and Great Britain and 325,000 for Japan. But this allotment was not satisfactory to the Americans.

It has been reported previously that a tripartite agreement had been reached, but this was denied by Hugh Gibson, head of the American delegation.

DEATH OF FERDINAND CREATES INTEREST ABOUT SUCCESSION

VIENNA, July 20.—News of the death of King Ferdinand, of Roumania, aroused keen interest throughout central Europe today as to the question of royal succession.

The new titular head of the Roumanian state is five year old Prince Michael, who was created heir apparent on Dec. 31, 1925, when his father, Prince Carol, renounced his rights to the succession.

A love affair led to Carol's action. He had become infatuated with a beautiful Roumanian woman and forsook his family to go to Paris to live with her.

Recently it had been reported Carol would return to Bucharest for a family council, but the arrangements for the trip fell through.

Queen Marie had been at her husband's bedside almost constantly since the fatal turn ten days ago. Queen Marie, of Yugoslavia, a daughter, arrived from Belgrade a week ago. Princess Elizabeth, another daughter, arrived yesterday.

Life, agile, spirited and, if I do say it myself, handsome in appearance.

"Nature endowed me with a lustrous coat of black and white and my seven years have served to bring me full strength and wisdom. In the company of young people I am happy and there is no truer friendship than that of a small child, and that you may all know."

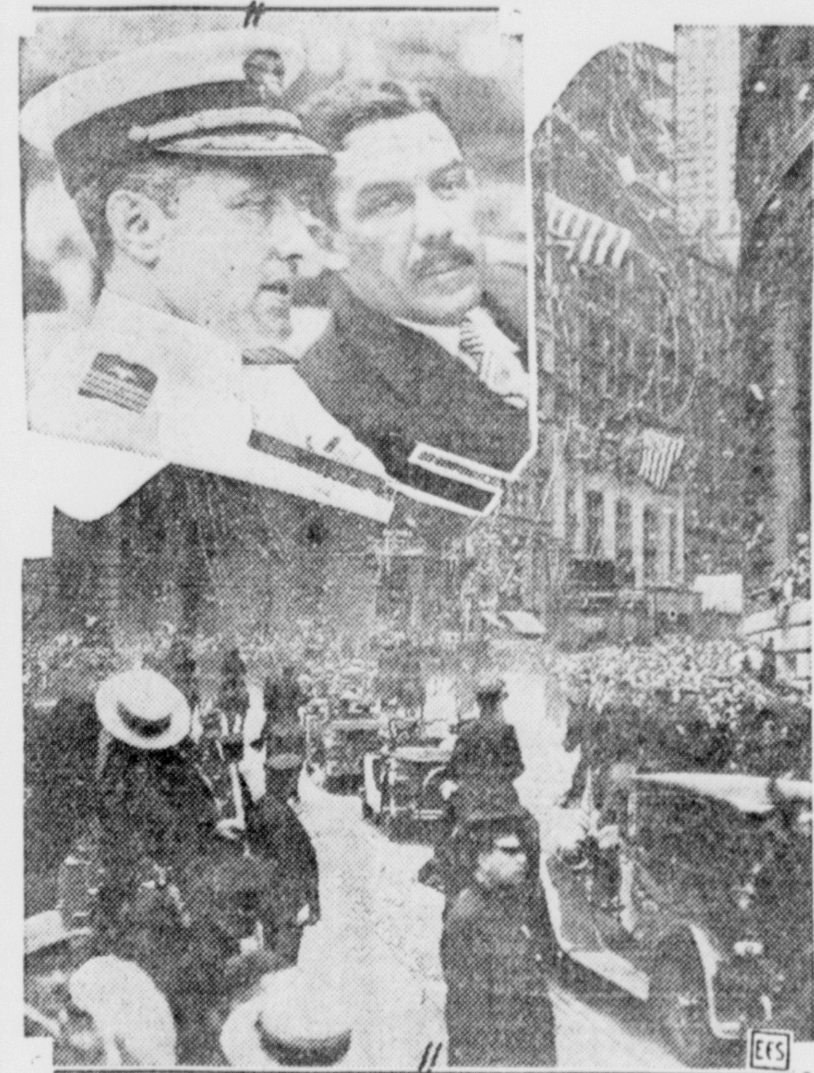

"If I am to be given to some Greene County boy or girl I hope that my new owner will be kind and generous, charitable in letting his playmates enjoy me, and will have fairly earned me by conscientious effort and honest endeavor."

"To those who enter the contest and do not win me, I trust there will be ample compensations in the cash commissions offered by the newspaper that is giving me away."

And thus having signified that he had made a very long speech indeed, "Beauty" indicated that he would like to be left alone. To enter the lists for "Beauty," all you have to do is to fill out the entry blank in the full page advertisement in today's paper, and mail it to the contest manager.

The contest starts Thursday morning and the winner will be based on the number of votes obtained for subscriptions to The Evening Gazette.

THREE INJURED WHEN AUTO HIT BY "HIT-AND-RUN" AUTOISTS

Baby Unhurt When Thrown Into Bushes Along Road—Victims Have Injuries Dressed At Hospital Here

Three persons, including two women, were injured, not seriously, when their car was struck by "hit-and-run" motorists on a road below Xenia, July 19, at 11 o'clock Tuesday night.

A baby was tossed out of the car into the high weeds along the pike and occupants of the machine searched for some time in the darkness before it was found and injured in the bushes.

The auto was occupied by J. W. Flowers, his wife, Mrs. Edith Flowers, Lockland, O., and Mrs. Lewis J. Sirotenbecker, Cincinnati, O. One of the women sustained a deep cut on the ankle and the others were painfully bruised.

The accident victims suffered so from their injuries, that they were unable to walk to the closest farm house or otherwise seek aid immediately. It was not until 1 o'clock that a passing motorist took the people to McClellan Hospital in Xenia, where their injuries were dressed by Dr. R. R. McClellan.

The crash victims were driven away from the hospital at 2:30 a. m. Wednesday by a man who came to Xenia from Springfield.

The injured motorists declared the second machine, occupied by several colored people, drove on without stopping after the accident. The license number of the car was obtained and a search may be conducted. The car was a Cadillac.

Full details of the accident were not obtained at McClellan Hospital.

CAVALIERI SUES FOR PARIS DIVORCE

PARIS, July 20.—Access to the divorce court to dissolve the marriage of Lucien Muratore, opera singer, and Lina Cavalieri, soprano and famed Italian beauty, today revealed that it was the soprano and not Muratore who started the action.

Mme. Cavalieri in her appeal charges that she had been deserted by her husband. She asked permission of the court to change her residence from the apartment where she had lived with Muratore to the Hotel D'Albe, Avenue George V. No plea for alimony is made.

Muratore has not filed an answer of any kind, and through his attorneys has informed the court that he will permit judgment by default.

Royal Family At Bedside Except Exiled Prince Carol—Regency Will Rule Until Heir Reaches Majority

BUCHAREST, Roumania, July 20.—Following a long illness from cancer, King Ferdinand, of Roumania, died at the royal palace at 2:15 o'clock this morning. Queen Marie and all the other members of the royal family except former Crown Prince Carol were at the bedside.

Carol, who renounced the right to succession because of marital troubles, has been living in self imposed exile in Paris. The members of the regency council, which will rule during the minority of Prince Michael, son of Prince Carol, met with the Bratiano cabinet today.

Premier Bratiano is expected to compromise with the National Peasant party, chief supporters of Prince Carol, in order to secure their support for the regency council, thus guaranteeing the exclusion of Prince Carol from any share in the government.

The scene in the death chamber was a pathetic one.

Last night the dying king kept continuously, falling intermittently into unconsciousness. His weakness was so great that he could scarcely speak although he tried to do so. His lips moved and Queen Marie bent over in an effort to hear what he wished to say, but the murmurs were so weak she could not understand them. It is believed that Ferdinand spoke of his absent son Carol whom he wished to see before he died.

For weeks the king had been wasting away and was little more than a skeleton when he died. Although Ferdinand had been suffering from a malignant growth for a long time his condition did not become serious until last year while Queen Marie was visiting the United States. A hurry call was sent to her to return home.

In the meantime specialists were summoned to Bucharest from Paris. Radium treatments administered and the king responded temporarily, but later his condition became worse.

Within the past few weeks Ferdinand sank rapidly and his death was expected.

King Ferdinand, of Roumania, was the last member of the house of Hohenzollern to occupy an important throne. He also was perhaps the most unhappy member of that once reigning house.

Although the Roumanian throne is hereditary, passing from father to son, Ferdinand was elected, not born to the throne. Born in 1865, the nephew of King Carol of Roumania, Ferdinand was designated by the Roumanian senate in 1899 the crown prince and heir to the throne. The selection was approved later by the Roumanian chamber of deputies.

Ferdinand was the hand-picked selection of a coterie of politicians who, at the end of the nineteenth century, were in power in Roumania, and during the years prior to his accession to the throne was dominated completely by these politicians. This domination followed Ferdinand through his years as reigning sovereign and was one of the unhappy influences in his life.

Prince Carol, who renounced his rights to the Roumanian throne to reside in Paris, said recently of King Ferdinand:

"My father, when he was made heir to the throne, was never allowed to think for himself, and even to this day he takes long times in making decisions, for he is inclined to ponder and consult."

Prince Ferdinand married Princess Marie of Sax-Coburg and Gotha January 10, 1893, and thus contracted another dominating influence. It has been no secret that the queen has been one of the strongest forces behind the Roumanian throne since Ferdinand's and her accession on October 11, 1914.

The king's rule has been fraught with internal strife and dissension, and the first four years of his reign were amid the holocaust of the world war. His country began to approach prosperity only when he faced death. Ferdinand always has been described as a mild-mannered, kindly man, who has lived under overshadowing influences which have made his life an unhappy one.

Since last December he has been suffering from cancer and the question of his death has been one only of time.

Parliament was convening today, prepared to administer the oath of regency to the council of regents when the news of the king's death was transmitted officially.

The regency council, which will rule the country during the minority of Prince Michael, is constituted of Patriarch Miron, Chief Justice Busdagan, of the supreme court and Prince Nicholas. However it is believed here that steps will be taken to revise this council and to give Premier Bratiano and the minister of war place in the regency.

Measures are understood to have been taken to prevent the entry of Prince Carol into Roumania. Thus far there have been no public demonstrations although crowds have gathered about the royal palace in Sinalia.

Soldiers in the Bucharest garrison are being held in quarters in the event of an emergency. Only two of the Bucharest newspapers issued extra editions on the king's death. The Dimineata and Universul issued extras announcing the death of the king and calling on the nation to give its loyalty to the new king and the regency.

The king's last official function was carried out yesterday when he conferred with Premier Bratiano and was advised that the Bratiano government had a safe majority in the new parliament.

LEAGUE KEEPS OLD COUPLE UNITED

What the Social Service League does for the aged members of the community who, for some reason or another are not in a position to help themselves, is of interest to all.

Some two or three years ago an aged couple was reported to the League. The old man was paralyzed. The couple had several children and were all married and with families of their own. Some of them were giving help to their parents and some would not.

It looked as if the League and the city would have to bear a large part of the support of these old people for an indefinite time. To solve this situation to the best advantage by making use of available facilities, the case was brought to the attention of the Probate Court. The children of the aged couple were called before the court and each was allotted a stated sum according to his income to be paid weekly towards the support of the parents.

Even with this solution the amount received was not quite sufficient to take care of the couple, and so was supplemented by the League and the city. In effect, the total amount was relatively small and it was far less expensive to the community to settle the matter in this way than to have them become public charges in some other way.

It was a satisfaction to keep this couple together and in their home. They were worthy of it, having always been good and respected citizens. Their case reveals in an interesting manner how the League works through all available means to assist those who have met with misfortune.

HOME PUPILS ENJOY OUTING AS GUESTS OF CELINA LEGION

After enjoying a week's outing at Mercellina Park, Celina, where they were guests of the Celina American Legion Post, twenty-three boys between the ages of seven and ten from the O. S. and S. O. Home, were returned to the institution last Sunday by Dr. Guy Bryson, Dr. T. J. Gibbons, Harold Bowman and Ray Younger.

An equal number of girls from the Home made the return trip to Celina for a week's outing at the same resort, arriving Sunday evening. Each contingent of girls was accompanied by a matron, who is assisted each day by members of the Legion and members of the women's auxiliary of the Legion.

During their week's stay at the park, the Home boys made the most of their opportunities to enjoy fishing trips, swimming parties, boat rides, hikes, special dinners each day, trips on the lake in speed boats, being guests for meals at Celina hotels, theater parties, treats at confectionaries, band concerts in their honor, and a glorious day at Edgewater Park, where they "took in" all the amusement features placed at their disposal by the park management during the entire day.

Grand Cheminot, Peter DeWeese, Lima, O., of the Northern District, Forty and Eight Society, assisted in the entertainment of the youths at Edgewater.

EIGHT DISCHARGED EMPLOYEES HEARD AT COLUMBUS MEETING

If it is found at a meeting of the state control board at Columbus Wednesday that eight professors and employees of the C. N. and L. department at Wilberforce University, who lost their jobs at the spring meeting of the trustee board, were "fired" for giving testimony at an investigation of the department conducted by a Chicago detective last December, the controlling board will indefinitely withhold the $1,000,000 appropriations for the university and refuse to confirm the list of seventy employees and their salaries submitted by the trustees for approval. The meeting was scheduled to begin at 10:30 a. m. and the eight discharged officials, represented by legal counsel, were to be given a hearing.

If the charges are substantiated by evidence, the control board will refuse to approve of the appointments made by the trustees to fill the eight vacancies created by the wholesale discharges.

Unkept Hands Spoil Entire Effect

Every woman should have soft, white, youthful hands to complete the picture of daintiness expected of her.

While eating, dancing, playing cards, in fact, whatever you do, your hands are noticed as much as your complexion. You can't neglect them without spoiling the impression you make by being well-groomed in every other detail.

The easiest way to keep your hands soft, white and firm is to massage them with the dainty lotion you can make by simply squeezing the juice of two lemons into a bottle of Orchard White, which you can get from your nearest dealer. It clears and refines the skin, making toll-worn and stained hands look like a queen's.

LABOR LEADERS AND PROGRESS

The United States and Great Britain have for some years been fortunate in the fact that so many "labor leaders" of both nations have been men of outstanding ability and character.

For the most part they have been, and are, progressive without being radical. They are liberal without being red.

Not that we haven't had ultra-radical leaders of the ranks of workingmen. But they have not proved their capacity for leadership in such a way as to attract men or to hold a following of importance.

The late Sam Gompers was a constructive man. He worked for and with the better forces of his government. He was intensely in earnest, not only in his ideal for improving the wages and general conditions of workingmen, but in his desire to co-operate with all the forces that would improve the status of the United States in the eyes of the world.

The present president of the American Federation of Labor, William Green, is a man of high character. And he has taste and brains. Green is progressive but he always proceeds in an orderly fashion.

For more than 30 years Green has been a member and officer of the United Mine Workers. He had a career of importance in the Ohio senate. Green is a man who is interested in the church.

The church and the American Federation of Labor do not make a bad combination.

We have many other labor leaders who are doing great work in keeping industrial conditions steady and harmonious.

Among the prime contributors to this steadiness—men who are progressive and yet keep their feet on the ground—are William P. Clarke, at the head of the International Union of Lint Glass Workers; Jim Lynch, for many years president of the International Typographical Union; George Berry, head of the pressmen.

HERRICK AND "LINDY"

Ambassador Herrick, who has just left Washington after a brief official visit, pending another sojourn in September before he goes to Paris, was left in no doubt of the administration's appreciation of his "Lindbergh diplomacy." In addition to bouquets from the state department, Mr. Herrick has been showered with compliments from all parts of the country. Many persons singled out the ambassador's messages to Mrs. Lindbergh: "Your incomparable son is sleeping tonight under Uncle Sam's roof," and to the president telling of French appreciation of Mr. Coolidge's Lindbergh cablegram as Herrick's outstanding acts. There's a myth that American diplomats are only super-messenger boys, who are supposed never to be guilty of initiative. Ambassador Herrick knocked that theory into a cocked hat when, wholly on his own account, he took "Lindy" under official wing at Paris and paved the way for the most striking episode in recent Franco-American diplomatic history.

The Way of the World

By Grove Patterson.

IT'S IN THE MIND

There is no obscenity in nature. Obscenity is a mental condition. So says Erskine, professor of English in Columbia University, and author of best sellers. Custom officials have been holding up shipments of unexpurgated, important books. Distortion is dangerous. Truth is not. Bitter, unreluctant caricatures of the sort that some so-called American realists write, are unjust, untrue, harmful.

As to books that really set forth life as it is, that paint human tendencies truly, it is often the mind of the censor and not the book that is dirty.

DRIFTING TOWARD WAR

Nations rarely plunge into war. They drift toward war. Too much emphasis on preparation for war starts the drift. Military for exercise are well enough. Compulsory military training in schools and colleges is wrong. The maintenance of a reasonable navy at the present stage of the world's temper is not to be hastily condemned. Any undue preparation for war helps to keep international peace from becoming a reality.

You can't bring up children and young men on military drills and not expect them to give impetus to the drift toward war.

MAN A FIGHTER

The fact is man is a natural fighter. He has fought his way up and out through the ages. The reason he goes to war is not so much because he is pushed into it by diplomats and propagandists. The principal reason is that he loves fighting. He has been developed in conflict. What are we going to do about that? Whatever we do, we have to begin far down, in youth.

SONGS of a HOUSEWIFE

OFFS By Marjorie K. Rawlins

QUEEN OF THE KITCHEN

I AM the queen of my kitchen,
The giver of rules and laws.
My wrath therein makes the mighty
Humble themselves and pause,

Meek and hushed are my people
When I am preparing food.
And whether they flee or enter
Depends on my whim and my mood.

I am a queen in the kitchen,
As dishes, Olympian, brown,
Some of my loyal subjects
Would swear that I wear a crown.

Over the pans and the kettles,
Over the table and stove,
My rolling-pin for a sceptre,
I am a female Jove!

So Say We, All Of Us

KELLYGRAMS

by Fred C. Kelly

IS STROLLING TO BE LOST ART?

Whenever I start to walk anywhere, somebody is sure to try to stop me.

If on a country road, I can't go 100 yards before a well-meaning automobilist offers to give me a lift. I never have the heart to tell him that I'm walking from choice. And in the city, if I set out alone, friends begin to tell me where to look for the nearest subway station.

Because traffic is a nuisance, most people have learned new habits and seem willing to walk except under extreme provocation. They don't walk voluntarily even late at night when streets are quiet.

The worst of this is not merely that we shall miss needed exercise but that we shall lose our sense of appreciation for one of the most charming of activities—aimless strolling. And if we don't walk for the sole purpose of looking at things, we shall lose much of our powers of observation. Who really observes much when riding swiftly in an automobile? The faster you go, the less you see.

But strolling along city streets and looking into shop windows is an ideal amusement for those of us who have no talent for more competitive exercises. Have you ever observed that no matter how long or how busy a street is, no two blocks are ever alike? No shop window, no matter how commonplace, is ever uninteresting, if you give your natural curiosity a chance. In the course of a long walk last night, I stood for a time in front of a shoe store. How many men, I wondered still wear button shoes? Why do most men seem to prefer so much fancy work on golf shoes?

Next to the shoe store was an antique shop. I noticed a little blue glass hat suitable for holding matches or toothpicks. It doesn't seem long since just such devices were sold in the Famous Cheap Stores, in my native town for a dime. Gracious, I must be getting old—consistently seeing objects, once in familiar every day use, now antique, rare, or expensive!

Even a millinery shop window is interesting to a stroller. Never any price tags on women's hats unless they are $5 or less.

And, by the way, it's amazing what a woman can sometimes do with a $5 hat. She can make a man believe that it's she herself instead of just the colors on her hat that he finds so dazzling.

Well, I must continue my stroll.

The new post office room is beginning to take on an entirely modern appearance. Through his membership in the U. C. ## GOOD WORK

"Dear Doctor Lulu: About this time last year I met one of your followers and she told me she had reduced from 211 to 170—41 pounds. She looked so fine and said she felt so well, that on that day I sent for your instructions. I now weigh 165 pounds—a loss of 50 pounds—which will never come back, if I know it. I haven't gained since I lost, and I feel and look ten years younger. A new woman! And I lost my hay fever and other disorders with the fat. I can get clothes to fit me! I'm five feet seven inches tall, thirty-three years old. Do you think 165 is too much for me? I look so well that all of my fat friends are converted, and are going to begin to Peterize.—MRS. Z."

According to the rule of 110 pounds for five feet in height (without shoes), and five and a half pounds for each inch over that, you should weigh around 160, without your clothes. Mrs. Z., as you have a bathroom scale, your 165 pounds is evidently without clothes, and it is fifteen pounds above the average. However, the fact that you feel and look so well, and haven't gained any since you stopped dieting, would indicate that 165 pounds was around the best weight for you. We do allow 5 to 10 per cent above, or below, this weight, for the heaviness of the bones and the general build.

It certainly is a joy to be able to get clothes of normal sizes, I know. I never will forget how thrilled I was when I was looking at some dresses and took one off the rack, and the saleslady said: "That wouldn't do for you; it's a large size."

Enough importance cannot be attached to this mental rejuvenation that comes with reducing to normal size. It means not only increased happiness from looking so much better, but there really is an increased mental efficiency.

You were wise in taking ten months to reduce your fifty pounds, Mrs. Z. That is an average of only five pounds a month, or one and one-fourth pounds a week, and see how much it has accomplished! There's no doubt that your food tastes have changed considerably, haven't they?

Please write us again and tell us if you are keeping up your exercises, and any other points that might help someone else?

(The directions on reducing and gaining can be obtained by sending a fully self-addressed stamped envelope and 2 cents in stamps.)

The Tomato

Do you like tomatoes? If you don't, it would be a good idea to learn to like them. For the tomato is one of the grandest of fruits we have. (Yes, while we commonly think of tomatoes as a vegetable, botanically they are a fruit.)

This is why they are so grand: They are very high in all of the vitamins, and because of the acid, these vitamins are retained even after cooking, drying and canning. The acid is the malic acid similar to the acid in apples, and it is bound with alkaline salts, so when it is oxidized, the alkaline salts help to keep the tissue fluids and blood in their normal alkalinity.

It doesn't seem possible now that the tomato used to be looked upon as poisonous and a cause of cancer. There was absolutely no foundation to base these calumnies upon. At any rate, it has come into its own now, for Sherman states that over 200,000,000 cans are put up for consumption each year by the factories.

Tomato juice is just as good for the anti-scurbutic vitamin as is orange juice, and can be used for the baby when oranges are too expensive, to prevent scurvy.

Another nice little thing about the tomato is that on account of its high content of water, it is low in calories, and therefore is a good little standby for those who are trying to reduce. One pound—three or four medium—is only 100 C., sixteen of which are protein. The same weight of the canned—one and three-fourths cups—is also 100 C. Canned tomato soups, because they are concentrated and have a little fat in them, you have to count 100 C. to the seven ounces. One of the best condiments we have is tomato ketchup, because it is concentrated, that averages also about seven ounces to the 100 C.

IT WAS IN the PAPER

Did you READ it?

Here are six questions dealing with news events of the past few days which have been reported in The Evening Gazette and The Morning Republican. Can you answer them accurately? If you can, you may claim credit as a really intelligent reader; but if you fail, that means you merely skim the news, as so many people do. Answers on Classified Page.

1. What great European city has recently been tied up by a general strike, requiring the action of troops to end it?

2. In what country was an American marine recently killed in a battle between government troops and native revolutionists?

3. Two internationally famous prisoners have gone on a hunger strike in an American prison. What are their names?

4. What leading figure in American politics has recently declared himself a candidate for the presidential nomination in 1928?

5. A central figure in a nationally notorious murder case has been sentenced to prison for life after a jury found him guilty. Give his name, and the office he previously held.

6. What understanding between two of the three nations participating in the Geneva naval disarmament conference has recently made it appear that a basis for general agreement will soon be reached?

Many Minds SIGNIFICANT SAYINGS OF THE DAY

"The accord for equal forces at Washington referred to capital ships, and after that no agreement was reached. Everybody could build what they liked. We think the best standard is the needs of a country. Let the powers state what they want and reach an agreement. Let it rest with the nations. We do not dispute the American claim for parity, but we sometimes ask ourselves if the needs of Great Britain and the United States are exactly the same, and if each is subject to the same reasons for wanting certain types of ships." Walter C. Bridgman, British first lord of the admiralty.

Little Old New York

NEW YORK, July 20.—A woman told me a funny incident that she witnessed recently. She was sitting in the women's rest room at Grand Central station, when all of sudden a great clatter and hubbub arose.

Sacrilege of sacrilege! No less than a man, a male person, a blip in trousers, was storming the sacred gates. Women stood up excitedly from the couches and sort of shushed him with their extended palms, motioning to him to retreat. The poor fellow knew the ticklish situation in which he had placed himself, and he blushed furiously. Middle aged, respectable, and a little bald, this man had been torture to him.

Finally the matron came out of an inner room and began to berate him indignantly for his conduct. The poor man stammeringly explained that his wife was sure she had left an umbrella in the room, and ordered him to stop in and see if it was found. The matron said she would look for it and requested him to wait outside. Whether he got the umbrella I do not know.

Walking through City Hall park, I noticed a large group of people gathered, apparently looking at a salesman's wares, or at someone who had fainted from the heat.

Entering the crowd, I could see nothing but an old shriveled colored woman sitting there. Everyone was staring at her. She wore a black dress with fringe spread all over it, an ordinary Turkish towel pinned down the front of her dress and one of those small black bonnets. She held a black silk fringed umbrella above her head. Enraged by the number of people staring at her so steadily, the old lady would, from time to time, break into a storm of denunciation. "What you all lookin' at?" she asked. "Can't you blank blank blank so-and-so leave an old lady alone?"

Then she would fall to counting the change in a small purse she held, complaining that she had lost some money.

No one in the crowd seemed to have the least idea what they were looking at her for. They simply remained because everybody else did. Finally, some bold fellow shamed the mob into breaking up. They slowly drifted apart under his biting words of scorn.

The thing that still puzzles me is how the crowd first started. Was it by one of those practical jokers who like to start pedestrians peering upwards? Or was the old lady really doing something diverting before I got there? For as I saw

Are you fighting against middle-age?

ONE OF the most critical periods of a woman's life comes between 45 and 50. Most women dread the approach of middle-age because they know, only too well, the depressing ailments it brings.

The best preparation for this period a woman can have is a good physical condition. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help her to gain strength and energy. It builds up the appetite and induces natural sleep. The following letters were written by women of middle-age.

AFTER LONG SUFFERING

South Omaha, Nebraska.—"After fifteen years of terrible suffering each month with sick headaches I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I have felt my health steadily improving. After taking your medicine for almost a year and a half, I believe I can say the headaches have left me. I also was troubled with nervousness. I am feeling fine now and do all my work myself. I am the mother of six, and manage an eight-room house without anybody to help. I feel that I am entirely well. Mrs. Adolph Bratke, 4316 South 13th St., So. Omaha, Nebraska."

MRS. BOLLERMAN'S CASE

West Hoboken, N.J.—"I was troubled with headaches, weakness, flushes of heat to the face and head and loss of appetite. I would often get so weak I could hardly stand. I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and began to take the medicine. After the first few bottles I began to feel stronger and could eat better and had fewer headaches. I feel like a different person. You may use this letter for every word is true. I will answer any letters sent to me." Mrs. Jennie Bollerman, 611 E. Leventhal St., Union City, New Jersey."

DOLLAR FINANCIAL YARDSTICK OF WORLD DECLARES LECTURER

"The American dollar is the financial yardstick of the world today," declared Ralph Parlette, humorous philosopher, just returned from a world tour, in a community talk, "Swat the Snake," before a large audience at the Chautauqua Tuesday night.

"This is because the pledge of the American people to work co-operatively stands back of it," he explained.

"There are just three kinds of pay in this world. God's pay, man's pay and money pay. God's

FINES AMOUNTING TO $1,500 ASSESSED UPON THREE CHARGES

Nellie Moore, 21, N. Detroit St., was assessed fines aggregating $1,500, exclusive of costs, on charges of possessing and transporting liquor and reckless driving by Probate Judge S. C. Wright, Tuesday afternoon.

Judge Wright imposed a fine of $800 and costs on the possessing charge, $600 and costs on the transporting charge, and $100 and costs for reckless driving.

The court passed sentence in each case at an overruling motion for new trials filed by defense counsel for each of the three charges upon which she was recently convicted.

Judge Wright also granted a stay of execution, permitting the defendant to appeal the judgments to Common Pleas Court, after notice of appeal had been given.

Defense counsel expects to file new bond for Miss Moore. She has been at liberty under bond of $1,000 but the court fixed her new bond at a total of $1,600, $850 in the possessing case, $625 in the transportation case and $125 for the reckless driving conviction.

Miss Moore is also defendant in a $10,000 damage suit filed in Common Pleas Court by Harold Minette, Athens, O., whom she is alleged to have deliberately run down and injured in an auto when the youth waved for her to stop along the Springfield Pike and give him a lift to Springfield.

The woman, authorities charged, then drove up a side road and threw out several cans containing liquor in the weeds along the pike.

Miss Moore pleaded not guilty to all three charges, protesting she was innocent of a deliberate attempt to injure the youth, and denied ownership of the tins of liquor found along the road.

POSTPONE QUOT GAME WITH N. C. R.

By a joint agreement of both clubs, the scheduled Miami Valley Quoit League match between Xenia and the N. C. R. of Dayton, scheduled for Monday night, July 25 at Dayton, has been postponed until August 8, due to the vacation period at the N. C. R. plant.

This postponement was provided for when the schedule was originally drawn up.

Rather than force a claim for a forfeit of the eighteen games, Xenia will probably play off its postponed match with the Dayton Eastwood Club on the local courts Friday night. The match has twice been postponed by Dayton.

The Theatre

George M. Cohan is bemoaning the passing of that "broad, raucous, glittering thoroughfare," that one time was Broadway. "Broadway? You mean Main St., don't you?" he asked a recent interviewer. "We used to have a Broadway, but the world has been moving so fast of late years, somebody mislaid it in the excitement."

Bert Lytell's "Jealousy and neglect" were described in suit for divorce filed a few days ago by Claire Windsor, wife of the motion picture star and herself a featured player in the films. Returning home one night, Lytell found a party in progress, Miss Windsor's complaint narrates, and, after accusing her of dancing too long with one certain guest, he ordered her to return to her mother.

"It was like viewing the home town a quarter of a century later and seeing a stand for taxis on the spot where the town pump used to be. Someone touched me on the arm as I stood there. 'Pardon me,' he said, 'can you tell me where—?' There wasn't any use letting him finish. Sorry, I told him, I'm a stranger here myself. Then I went back to my hotel. Broadway was just Main St., full of collar shops, orangeade stands and movie theaters."

SWAT FEST ENABLES RESERVES TO RAISE AVERAGE WITH CLUB

The record-breaking total of twenty-three hits collected by the Reserves in the alleged baseball game last Sunday, served to raise the team's hitting average for the season to a mark of .342, an increase of thirteen percentage points.

Reserves have now won thirteen games and dropped two but have anything but a soft snap in prospect Sunday when the Richmond, Ind. nine appears here.

In the fifteen games this season, Reserves have been to bat 546 times, scored 156 runs and made 187 hits. This is an average of ten runs and twelve hits per contest. Batting records follow:

FIVE FOR A QUARTER

That's All It Costs to Buy Good Cigars Today. Smokers Everywhere Enthusiastic

It seems out of the question to some smokers—but the sober truth is that there is a good cigar now selling at 5c. It sold at more than a nickel for years. It became so popular that the makers put the price down to five cents. And improved the quality. Sales mounted. Men like it because it is mild, fragrant and satisfying as only ripe tobacco can be. Millions are sold.

Yet some smokers hold back. They can't quite believe in any cigar selling at 5c, no matter how well it's established. If you're an unbeliever you're standing in your own light. Ask for "Havana Ribbon" and produce a nickel. Then, put on the work with that cigar. Smoke it fast or slowly. Notice its aroma, mildness, sweetness. Notice how it satisfies you without leaving you fed up. You'll bank on Havana Ribbon from then on.

Enough to make a pipe get puffed up

IF YOUR jimmy-pipe could talk, it would say: "Fill me with Prince Albert and watch me strut. I'll repay you a hundred-fold." No doubt about it, many a pipe has been blamed for things that weren't its fault at all. You have no idea how well a pipe behaves on P.A.

On my say-so, buy yourself a tidy red tin of good old P.A. today. Throw back the hinged lid and revel in that fragrance of the world's greatest pipe-tobacco, bar none. Then tuck a neat wad into the business-end of your pipe and light up. There's the answer to every pipe-wish.

Cool as a pound-keeper. Sweet as escape from the place he keeps. Mild, but with that full, satisfying flavor of the greatest tobacco that ever tumbled into a pipe. No matter how wide you open the smoke-throttle, there isn't a stop-sign or a detour anywhere.

Nearby is a store where they hand out jimmy-pipe joy in tidy red tins. My advice to you is to make tracks for there at once. Fill your pipe with this glorious tobacco and get the fun that's due you. No matter what your present program is, try P.A. Give your pipe a chance!

P. A. is sold everywhere in tidy red tins, pound and half-pound tin humidors, and pound crystal-glass humidors with sponge-moistener top. And always with every bit of bite and punch removed by the Prince Albert process.

The Rovin' Ritzies By Flo Frederick

Will Fluffy like her new nest?
This is the important test.
"It sure is lucky this tree had a big branch close to the ground, isn't it?" Rag.
"I wouldn't have tried to build it around a perfectly straight tree," answered Marty.
"I don't yet see just how you are going to manage it," said Rag, a little doubtfully.
Marty had undertaken the task of building a tree-house for Fluffy-tail, their bushy-tailed squirrel, and though he insisted that it wouldn't be hard to make, the rest of the Ritzies were still a little doubtful that it could even be done.
Taking charge of things, and giving orders to each of every one of his five helpers, Marty wasn't long in getting things under way. They first built a square frame around the base of the tree, making it the size they wanted the tree-house to be. The four up-rights were then joined at the top with a similar square framework. Of course the top and bottom frames had to be the same size when finished so that the screen wire would stretch smoothly from top to bottom. They braced the uprights with cross-pieces about two and a half feet from the ground. The top of the frame measured exactly five feet.

"I guess we are ready to put on the screen wire," he announced, standing back to look at the finished framework.
"That will be a job," said Bill. "You're all afraid of work," kidded Marty. "All we have to do is cut it to fit the frames and tack it on. I'll put in the corner tacks and the rest of you can draw it tight and put in tacks every inch or so along the frames."
"How are we going to be able to feed Fluffy-tail?" asked Betty Ann. "You'll have him all screened in."
"Oh, no I won't," laughed Marty. "That's why I left that front square till last. I'll have to make a little hinged door that will fit in to a wooden frame. I wanted to get everything else done first so

CHAPTER XV.

Aunt Emily came popping into the flat that night between 8 and 9.

"I just had a feeling that something was wrong here," she said to Sally, when she heard about Mrs. Jerome's attack.

Aunt Emily had an uncanny way of suspecting when things were not going smoothly with the Jeromes. She had a nose for misfortune, and she could scent bad luck from afar—the way some people can tell when a storm is coming.

"You wouldn't be sick like this if you weren't so lary, and didn't make such a pig of yourself at meals," she snapped at her sister-in-law, when she went in to see her.

Mrs. Jerome only groaned and turned her head to the wall. She was no match for Aunt Emily, and she had sense enough to know it.

"Yes, and you can groan and moan and all but ask me to get out!" went on Aunt Emily, with a nod of her head. "But I'm not going until I've said my say—and I tell you that you're going to die in one of these attacks some day unless you stop over-eating the way you do!"

Mrs. Jerome rolled over in bed and turned up beseeching eyes to Sally. "Must I listen to all this?" she asked, helplessly. "Can't you get her out and make her stay out? I'm too sick to listen to her."

"You hate to hear the truth—that's all that ails you!" was Aunt Emily's parting shot.

But later, when smart young Dr. Ambler came, he said much the same thing that Aunt Emily had said.

"She has another of her attacks of acute indigestion—at least, that's how it looks to me," he told the anxious Sally. "I've been telling her for years that she eats too much and doesn't move around enough."

Mrs. Jerome gazed at him silently. There was intense fury in her face and she did not say "Good night" to him when he left. She hated to be told that she ate too much.

"You don't look so well yourself," the doctor told Sally on his way out, bag and hat in hand. "Overworking, aren't you?"

Sally shook her head as she looked at him. Her blue eyes were clouded with the heat, her face was white under the soft damp rings of her hair.

"Indeed I'm not," she said. "You see, I only worked a half day down town. I'm just around home the rest of the time."

He said nothing. But he went away with a vision of her tired face with lines of strain around the lovely mouth, and of the small work roughened hand that held out his five-dollar fee to him.

He guessed more about her than she knew.

Once in his life, at least, every man makes a fool of himself over a woman.

And that was exactly what John Nye was doing over little Millie Jerome.

Sally knew it the minute she saw them enter the flat together that Saturday night.

She had been nodding over her reading basket and had not heard them come up the stairs and unlock the door. But suddenly they were in the room with her—Millie radiant in the lamplight and John Nye, darkly handsome, looking at her as if she were the only thing in the world for him.

Her heart seemed to give a great throb in her breast and then stand still as she caught that glance. But she gave no outward sign of what she felt.

"Well, if I'd known you were bringing Mr. Nye up I'd have changed my dress, Millie," she said.

looking at them both with her natural sweetness of expression. "Won't you—would you like some lemonade? I'll make some."

"She started up from her chair. Her whole impulse was to escape—to get away. In her old cap and apron, to the kitchen where she told herself fiercely, she belonged. Millie, in airy white, with her soft little snowflake of a hand on John Nye's coat-sleeve, made her feel like Cinderella, all at once.

The familiar kitchen seemed to welcome her—to twinkle at her comfortably—when she went out to crack ice and squeeze lemons into the old glass pitcher.

"You look a perfect sight," she told her reflection in the mirror over the sink. "But what's the difference, John Nye doesn't know you're on earth tonight!"

Millie was perched on the arm of John Nye's chair when she returned to the lamp-lit living room. She was trying to make his cigarette lighter work, and he was watching her with that same intense look in his eyes.

"Let me show you how to do it," he was saying, and he covered her little fingers with his hand, as he showed her how to strike a light to his cigarette.

"Have a smoke?" he asked, offering her his case.

Millie smoked constantly, but now she shook her gleaming head. "Little Millie never smokes," she said in her best baby-talk, and even that didn't seem to disgust John Nye.

On the other hand, it seemed to charm and amuse him. "He's pretty far gone," said Sally to herself, as she watched him, and she thought was dull agony to her.

She picked up Millie's coat and hat and started out of the room once more. This time she was not going to come back, she firmly made up her mind.

"Where's Mommie?" asked Millie, who never spoke lovingly of her mother unless there was a man around to listen to her.

Sally's eyes widened. "Why, she's in bed, of course," she answered. "You knew she was sick when she left her this afternoon."

Millie shook her head. "Why no, darling. You're got your dates mixed. She was all right this afternoon," she fibbed smoothly and convincingly. "Otherwise I'd never have left the house."

She smiled straight down into John Nye's eyes. "Not even with you?" she said. "Mother always comes first with me. She always has."

And leaving that brazen untruth to get in its work, she averted out of the room like a tall lily blown in a breeze. John Nye's dark eyes followed her hungrily.

Sally saw that before she got out of the room—just how, she never knew.

But presently she was in the rear hall, on her way to the bedroom at the back. There was a light in it, and Millie was standing before the dresser, carefully outlining her soft mouth with lipstick.

"I thought you were going in to see how mother was," Sally said to her, and her voice was cold.

Millie looked bored. "Oh, don't be silly," she answered calmly. "I know there's nothing really the matter with her. She just stuffs herself, and then her tummy aches. I told her so this afternoon when she was ripping all over the place in the world for him."

ten dollar bill look like a postage stamp."

He grinned suddenly, and took his fifth large piece of apple cake that Sally had bought with her own money.

Then he nodded at Millie, cross-looking and rosy as a baby, on the other side of the table.

"Why don't you ask Jessie James, the girl bandit, to lend you some?" he asked Sally. "She can borrow some from that new boss of hers who's got such a crush on her."

"Borrow!" repeated Sally. "Borrow! Why you and Millie don't have to borrow from anybody. You make plenty—and all I ask you to do is to give me ten dollars every week. But I can't get you to do it, somehow."

Millie set her mouth firmly. "I'll give you my ten when Beau gives you his," she declared. "And not one minute sooner!"

There was a long silence, broken by the drowsy buzz of a fly above the sunny table and the distant sound of church bells.

Beau got up abruptly and went out of the room.

His voice came back to them, sharp and strained. "Oh, my lord, I wish you'd stop talking about money! If you don't I'm going to go crazy!"

Millie stared at Sally in astonishment. "Well, now what's the meaning of that!" she gasped. "Has he lost his blooming mind?"

Sally shook her head. She had seen the look of anxiety on Beau's face, and she knew that he "had" lost his blooming mind, but was only at his wife's end about something. . . . . About money, of course.

Money and love—they were the only things that really mattered to people, weren't they?

Money—and love. She thought of John Nye, and Millie and herself. The three of them.
